

Conferences on energy unprecedented

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has proposed unprecedented diplomatic cooperation to solve an unprecedented global energy problem and says the world's prosperity and stability is at stake.

President Nixon in a letter to oil-producing nations, released Thursday, said the world stands at a crossroads between cooperation and "increasing political and economic conflict."

In another letter, inviting the industrial, oil-consuming nations to a meeting Feb. 11 in Washington, Nixon said this would be "a first and essential step toward the establishment of a new arrangement for international energy and related economic matters."

Nixon said a further meeting between both consumer and producer nations would be held within 90 days after the Feb. 11 meeting.

Elaborating on the plans in a news conference, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said still another meeting would be planned in between, bringing together both the industrialized and the developing oil-consuming nations.

The planned series of international conferences, Kissinger said, is unprecedented in diplomacy — but so is the worldwide energy problem.

Kissinger said the Arab oil nations' cutoff of oil shipments to the United States and the Netherlands, to bring indirect pressure on Israel, was "becoming increasingly inappropriate," but was not the basic cause of the world's energy problem.

That was caused, he said, by two factors — excessive energy demand and drastically increased oil prices recently imposed by a number of foreign producers.

The price increases, he said, would hit especially hard at underdeveloped nations using oil as they try to build up their economies.

All of the foreign aid given to those countries, Kissinger said, was cancelled "in one afternoon's decision by the price increase that has been imposed on these countries."

He said the new oil bill could reach $30 billion and the developing nations could not pay it.

Kissinger said the United States could go it alone, developing its own energy resources and making separate deals with oil-producing nations. But competition for oil through such bilateral agreements would damage the economies of other countries and, eventually, the entire world economy, he said.

He said the United States rejected that approach and urged international cooperation.

In the long run — 10 to 15 years — the United States will become self-sufficient in energy and may even have a surplus. When it does, Kissinger said, it may share its energy with others.

Invited to the Feb. 11 meeting in Washington were the foreign ministers of Canada, Japan, West Germany, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway and Britain.

These eight countries plus the United States account for 75 to 80 per cent of the world's petroleum consumption, Kissinger pointed out.

He said the series of meetings to begin in February would aim at developing "a series of agreements or understandings" on sharing energy technology, analyzing energy demand and conserving energy resources.

To such additional problems as the fate of the developing nations and the impact of energy problems on the international balance of payments, Kissinger said, "we frankly haven't even the beginning of an answer."

But he said the energy crisis may be only the forerunner of similar international problems revolving around other raw materials and even food "where incentives for supply are out of proportion to the demand."

In his letter to the major oil-consuming nations, Nixon called the energy crisis "an historic crossroad" and said the nations "face a fundamental choice that can profoundly affect the structure of international, political and economic relations for the remainder of this century."

Meanwhile, in Seattle, Wash., Sen. Henry M. Jackson said large international oil companies should be brought under federal regulation and chartering.

Jackson said he would introduce legislation to put federal representatives on the board of directors of each major oil company, to end the oil depletion tax allowance for American oil companies overseas and to establish his proposal for federal chartering of oil companies.

In other energy developments:

—The Federal Energy Office reported that the nation had an oil shortage of some 1.8 million barrels per day during the week ended Dec. 28, but made up for it by reducing demand successfully.

—FEO policy analyst William A. Johnson said the petroleum shortage may be less than expected and that "evidence suggests we will be able to avoid (gasoline) rationing." At a Commerce Department conference, Johnson told travel industry representatives it may be necessary to cut gasoline use only half as much as the 30 per cent reduction originally feared.

Subzero cold is expected in wake of heavy snowstorm

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Subzero cold is expected to sweep over Kansas and Missouri tonight behind the snowstorm that moved eastward out of the area.

Temperatures were expected to rise no higher than five to 10 degrees above zero today then plunge to below zero tonight as clearing skies allow a mass of polar air to take full effect.

The National Weather Service said the sun should brighten most of the area Saturday.

Travel remained hazardous as road crews continued trying to clear pavements of snow and ice.

Some light snow persisted in southeast Kansas this morning, but skies had cleared in the west. The sun afforded only a few degrees of warmth after overnight lows which went as deep as 10 degrees below zero at Concordia. The low at Pittsburg was 13.

The snow blanket which has covered most of the state since the weekend between Christmas and New Year's was still 11 inches deep at Russell and 12 at Concordia.

Southwest Missouri had more snow flurries this morning and there was some freezing drizzle in eastern Missouri.

The mercury skidded to 10 below zero at Maryville overnight, with Cape Girardeau at the other end of the temperature span at 22.

St. Joseph and Columbia reported snow accumulations of 10 inches after Thursday's storm put a new top on the covering which has blanketed most of Missouri for almost two weeks.

Tonight's lows are expected to be between zero and five below in north Missouri to around 10 along the south border. Highs in the 20s were forecast for Saturday, promising some moderation for northern Missouri but not for the south.

A warming trend on Monday will accompany the threat of snow Monday night, changing to rain on Tuesday. The long-range outlook indicates temperatures might rise as high as the upper 30s in Northern Missouri to around 50 in the south by Tuesday.

Road conditions and the severe cold caused the closing today of almost all schools in the metropolitan Kansas City area of both Kansas and Missouri.

In addition, the cold placed such a drain on the Gas Service Co., that it reduced its supply of natural gas to the schools in Paola and Osawatomie in eastern Kansas under their interruptible contracts.

The situation duplicates an emergency that arose in December. Since then, however, Paola has installed alternate heating systems in four of its five schools, but the high school had to be closed Thursday. About 650 students may have to miss classes a week unless emergency fuel is obtained, said Supt. George Diehm.

Osawatomie closed two of its four schools because only two have been equipped with propane heaters since the December shutdown.

At least five Missouri high school basketball tournaments were postponed Thursday night.

weather

Clearing and quite cold tonight; low 5 to 12 below; winds light and variable; partly sunny and continued cold on Saturday with high 5 to 12 above. The temperature Friday was 8 at 7 a.m. and 6 at Noon. Low Thursday night was 8.

Lake of the Ozarks stage: 55.8; 4.2 feet below full reservoir. Sunset today will be at 6:11 p.m.; Sunrise Saturday at 8:31 a.m.

Salt supply dwindles

Schools, plants closed by weather

Although the skies were clear Friday, many local and area roads and streets remained ice and snow covered, causing the continued cancellation of all county schools and most other area educational institutions.

Also closed for the day was State Fair Community College which was in the middle of final examination week when the snow and ice siege struck. SFCC President Fred Davis Friday said that examinations scheduled for Thursday will be given Monday with Friday finals slated for Tuesday. In addition, Davis said, any student who missed taking a final exam earlier in the week because of hazardous driving conditions may reschedule their tests with their instructors.

Also closing for the second consecutive day, were the Lamy Manufacturing Co. and Town and Country Shoes.

Although most city sidewalks remain slick, pedestrians have apparently been careful while walking. A spokesman for Bothwell Hospital reported Friday morning that no snow-related injuries were reported.

During the brunt of the winter storm Thursday, local telephone usage increased 37 per cent with directory assistance and special operator calls up 67 per cent, Bob Johnson, local Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. office manager, said Friday.

A spokesman for the city street department Friday said crews will probably work through the weekend to complete their latest street-clearing efforts. He indicated that, since the beginning of the winter, 50 tons of salt, two tons of calcium sulfate, and between 40 and 50 tons of sand have been spread on city streets.

"These," said the eight-year employee, "are the largest amounts we have ever had

Kissinger is hoping to aid Suez agreement

MADRID (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger headed for the Middle East today with high hopes that he can "grease the way" for an agreement between Egypt and Israel to pull back their armies intermingled around the Suez Canal.

A senior official said Kissinger may emerge with a formal proposal to put before the Geneva peace conference, but even if he does not he expects to bring the two sides close enough together to negotiate a disengagement.

Kissinger stopped off in Spain to meet Pedro Cortina, the new foreign minister in a government that was substantially revised following the assassination Dec. 20 of Premier Luis Carrero Blanco. Kissinger will fly to Aswan, Egypt, in mid-afternoon and may meet immediately with President Anwar Sadat upon arrival.

The Egyptians already have made several concrete proposals and Kissinger received "a pretty good idea" of Israel's position from Defense Minister Moshe Dayan last weekend in Washington. Now, the U.S. official said, he is ready to shuttle between Egypt and Israel over the next few days in order to overcome their mutual distrust and smooth out the "technical issues" that stand in the way of disengagement.

If his middleman role is productive, Kissinger intends to shuttle back and forth twice between Sadat in Aswan, where he is recovering from bronchitis, and the Israeli Cabinet in Jerusalem. He also probably will expand his travels to Jordan for a session with King Hussein, to Damascus to see President Hafez Assad and to Brussels on the way home to brief European ministers.

Initially, Kissinger had planned only three days on the road but his trip evidently will expand to at least one week. "What we expect to do on this trip, is to see whether we can transform the general ideas that have up to now been advanced into a concrete proposal," Kissinger said in a Thursday news conference.

He again denied that he expects to return to Washington with an agreement. But he was optimistic that the likely outcome "would be a negotiation which would be conducted" at the Geneva peace conference site.

Wage, price control extension request decision is upcoming

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration will decide within the next few weeks whether it will ask Congress for authority to continue wage and price controls beyond April, says John T. Dunlop, director of the Cost of Living Council.

Meanwhile, one council source said there was a 50-50 chance the administration would ask to extend its controls authority.

Hearings on the future of the administration's economic controls program are scheduled to begin Jan. 31 before the Senate banking committee's subcommittee on productivity and stabilization.

Dunlop said he will appear before the committee Feb. 6 with other administration officials and should be prepared to make some recommendations at that time.

"I don't think I can duck it," he said in an interview Thursday.

There are growing indications that the energy crisis, plus the prospect of continuing high inflation in months to come, is causing the Administration to reconsider its hope of ending controls when the current legislative authority expires April 30.

One tentative deadline already has passed. President Nixon had said when he had announced the phase four controls program last summer that he hoped all controls could be lifted by the close of the 1973.

But that was before the energy crisis had fully developed and before it became clear that the high rate of inflation that started early in the year was not going to end in 1973.

Dunlop, a former Harvard economics professor, said it is still possible for the administration to end controls in April, but he acknowledged there is a question whether public opinion and congressional sentiment will permit it.

Much will depend on "how Congress will follow up when they see the price increases we're in," he said.

Dunlop noted that while big business and big labor have publicly advocated a quick end to the current controls program neither has initiated a serious lobbying effort in Congress. But he said they may be waiting to start lobbying when Congress reconvenes.

While Dunlop agreed that the prospect of continuing high inflation may be a factor in the final decision of Congress and the administration on controls, he cautioned, "There is never any ideal time to get out of controls."

He also said there is a real question of "what we believe controls can do and what we believe they can't do."

Dunlop said he will have White House approval for whatever recommendation he makes to the subcommittee.

And he said various possibilities have been proposed, including lifting controls all together, lifting controls but maintaining stand-by authority to reimpose them, and maintaining controls over the nation's largest corporations.

He declined to state his own preference but indicated he already has drawn up some recommendations for the White House.

Accompanying Kissinger was veteran diplomat Ellsworth Bunker.

After sounding out Sadat on Israeli concepts for military disengagement, Kissinger will go to Jerusalem Saturday.

He and Prime Minister Golda Meir will go over the Egyptian reaction and it will be back to Egypt for the American secretary.

Even though Kissinger said he did not expect his travels to produce an Egyptian-Israeli agreement, he said "if the Israeli cabinet decides after my first visit to make a proposal, we will be prepared to take it to Egypt."

Before leaving, State Department officials were coy about other stops during the trip.

However, there were indications Kissinger might stop at other Arab capitals, possibly Amman, Jordan, and Damascus. Syria, so far Syria has refused to take part in the Geneva talks.

Kissinger's news conference was held with William E. Simon, the Nixon administration's leading official on energy policy.

Concerning the oil shortage, the secretary said there is no link between the Middle East negotiations and the continuing Arab refusal to ship oil to the United States.

This latest trip is Kissinger's third to the Middle East since October.

British engineers end train slowdown

LONDON (AP) — Locomotive engineers called off a work-by-the-book slowdown today, and rail service was reported up to 80 per cent normal on some lines and 50 per cent on others.

But they continued a ban on overtime and Sunday work and threatened a one-day strike next Tuesday unless the National Railways Board resumes wage negotiations.

There was also slender hope of progress toward ending the coal miners' slowdown that impelled Prime Minister Edward Heath to put 16 million of Britain's 25 million workers on a three-day work week Jan. 1. Reversing a previous rejection, Heath and his top economic ministers met with union leaders to discuss a proposal by the Trades Union Congress to get the mines back to full production.

The railwaymen said they were suspending their slowdown to get the rail board back to the negotiating table. The board, which previously had said it would not negotiate under duress, said it would consider the union move today.

The rail board said most trains were back on schedule by 3 a.m. after weeks of curtailed service and a near-standstill in the London area Thursday when the Board took disciplinary action against some engineers and most others walked off the job.

The walkout halted all but 58 of the 532 commuter trains normally running in the London metropolitan area. But most commuters got to work one way or another. Traffic was jammed up for 50 miles out of the city.

The TUC's proposal to end the coal miners' ban on overtime and weekend work calls for the government to meet the miners' demand for wage increases above the ceilings set by Heath's anti-inflation program. In return, the TUC would guarantee that other unions would not use this as a lever in their own wage negotiations.

Four known dead in explosion

WEST ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A propane storage tank exploded in the middle of a large apartment complex early today, heavily damaging two apartment buildings. Authorities said at least four persons were killed and nine injured.

Officials said the explosion occurred as firemen arrived on the scene to fight a fire which had broken out on a tanker truck loading the storage tank.

Most apartment residents had been evacuated before the explosion but authorities expressed concern that some may have been trapped in the building by the explosion.

The known dead included three firemen and a woman resident of one of the buildings.

Of the injured, four were admitted to hospitals, at least one of them in critical condition. Five others were treated and released.

The explosion, which occurred about 12:30 a.m., sent a huge fireball into the air that could be seen in downtown St. Paul, some four miles away.

The storage tank held 10,000 gallons and the tanker truck had a capacity of 16,000 gallons, said Russell Scheibel, director of public safety.

With temperatures at 6 degrees below zero, flames swept the 66-unit Bellows Court apartment building and spread to the 33-unit Charlton Arms building, both three-story structures. Only a shell of the Bellows Court building was left intact, witnesses said.

An estimated 750 families were evacuated from 15 apartment buildings in a four-block area as a precautionary measure.

Fire Chief Don Hove reported about 6 a.m. that the fire had been brought under control and the danger of another explosion had apparently passed.

Quakers outspoken on Nixon

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In the light of their particular religious links to President Richard Nixon, Quakers have been among the most outspoken of church groups in urging impeachment proceedings on his conduct, or his resignation.

Other religious bodies generally have avoided this sort of specific demand. But a growing number of Quaker meetings have issued such calls to him as a brother sharing their tradition.

"They feel a special responsibility in the matter because of his background as a Quaker," says Walter Ludwig, of Yonkers, N.Y., legislative committee chairman of the New York Yearly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends.

Among the latest of the Quaker groups taking such a stand was the Stanford-Greenwich, Conn., meeting, which late last month appealed to the President as a fellow Quaker to resign from office.

Citing his Quaker background, the meeting said there appeared to be "serious discrepancies" between traditions he would be expected to respect and actions for which he was responsible, citing a list of them, and urging him to resign.

"We feel tender toward you in the moral dilemma in which you have placed yourself, and sympathize with you in your pain," the meeting added.

"However difficult your resignation may be to you personally, it would aid in dispelling the atmosphere of corruption in our national government. We pray that the power of light will give you courage and consolation."

Several other Quaker meetings, including those in Baltimore, Columbia and Adelphi, Md., have backed impeachment proceedings against the President.

Although many other church bodies have debated the issue, they mostly have refrained from demanding impeachment steps. Only sub-units of the United Methodist Church have done so among major denominations.

Most of them have stressed the need for national repentance and moral renewal. Some Quaker meetings also similarly have shunned advocating impeachment procedures.

Tuition hike for Catholic high schools

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Beginning next fall, parents of students attending St. Louis archdiocese Catholic high schools will pay $50 more in tuition.

The Rev. John J. Leibrich, archdiocesan schools superintendent, said Thursday the increase to $435 is "to maintain the quality of education ... to which our schools are committed."

Families affected by the increase are those which have students at Bishop duBourg, DeAndres, John F. Kennedy, Laboure, Mercy, Rosary, Rosati-Kain, St. Mary's, St. Pius X and St. Thomas Aquinas high schools.

Tuition for second and third students within the same family at the same school will not be affected.

Church news

"He Brought Him to Jesus" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. Lawrence Stewart at the Sunday morning service at the First Baptist Church. The service will be broadcast by KSIS radio at 10:45 a.m. Sunday.

The evening sermon topic will be "For What Is Your Life?"

"Sacrament" will be the topic of discussion Sunday for members of the First Church of Christ Scientist, 120 East Sixth. The Golden Text is Romans 14:17.

Convention planned at Warrensburg

WARRENSBURG — The semi-annual circuit assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses will be held Jan. 19 and 20 at Hendricks Hall on the Central Missouri State University campus here. About 2,000 persons are expected to attend.

The main speakers will be Hayes Hoskins and Everett E. Knickmeyer, both engaged in full-time ministry for the church.

The convention theme is "Keep Close In Mind Jehovah's Day," based on 2 Peter 3:12. The purpose of the assembly is to provide advance ministry training and Bible instruction.

Compulsory union dues attacked

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The use of compulsory union dues for political purposes jeopardizes the nation's system of representative government, an official of the National Right to Work Committee declared Thursday night.

Reed Larson, deploring legislation introduced before Congress, said a "handful of powerful union bosses" would actually capitalize through defective campaign reform laws.

"Close to $2 billion in union dues is collected each year from wage earners who are forced to pay that money or lose their jobs," said Larson, who addressed the Discussion Club.

"Union officials then invest a substantial part of that money in political activities, many of which are opposed by those who under federal law have been compelled to pay up or be fired," he said.

Larson said the United Auto Workers Union has agreed to rebate $3.68 per member per year in dues on request but that only 100 of the union's 1.4 million members are demanding the rebates.

The Right to Work Committee is an arch opponent of compulsory unionism. Union dues, Larson said, dilute political freedom.

Britain's Northern Ireland peace program a foul again

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Britain's program for peace in Northern Ireland has run into another setback less than two weeks after it seemed to start getting off the ground.

Brian Faulkner, the Protestant chief of Ulster's first Protestant-Roman Catholic coalition government, has been repudiated by a small majority of the leaders of his Unionist party. He is going to the rank and file for support, a move that could split the Protestant faction that ruled the province for 50 years.

Ratification of the agreement for a Council of Ireland bringing the North and the Irish Republic together for very limited cooperation is likely to be postponed.

Faulkner, 52, quit Monday as leader of the Unionists after the party council voted 457 to 374 against the Council of Ireland. The outcome was a victory for hardliners who oppose sharing power with the Catholics.

Faulkner moved into new offices on Belfast's bomb-battered Victoria Street and said he would build a new political base among the moderate members of the party. He vowed to remain at the head of the new coalition government, known as the Northern Irish Executive, which began operating Jan. 1.

Faulkner kept the support of 18 of his original 20 Unionist supporters in the new provincial Assembly, which resumes sessions Jan. 22. With the support of 27 members of the Catholic-based Social Democratic and Labor party and the non-sectarian Alliance party, the

Eagleton is against large hog farm proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed hog farm in Missouri now under feasibility study by private and university economists is opposed by Sen. Tom Eagleton, D-Mo.

Eagleton has called for a Senate investigation of the proposal, which he and others say could take 5,000 farmers out of the pork market.

Eagleton, in a letter Wednesday to Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., said, "If this operation goes unchallenged, it could be the first step in destroying effective and efficient competition in the U.S. hog market."

The staff of Hart's antitrust and monopoly subcommittee is known to have been gathering information on the proposed operation in Clark County, Mo.

It would produce, slaughter, package and market between one million and two and a half million hogs a year, Eagleton said, eliminating from the market "more than half of the annual hog production" currently handled by small farmers in the fourth largest hog producing state. The proposal already has come up in corporate-monopoly hearings before another Senate panel.

"This attempt to vertically integrate the hog market could have disastrous effect on independent hog producers throughout the nation," Eagleton said.

One needs only to reflect on how effectively the vertically integrated major oil companies are currently wiping out the independent gasoline retailers to determine the seriousness of the problem."

Citing government studies showing small farms to be more efficient than corporate farming, Eagleton said, "It is not productivity and it is certainly not the quality of the product they produce that allows conglomerates to remain in the business. Once their competition is destroyed, prices are at the mercy of a few big producers who value profit above all else."

Man fatally hurt in building fire

BUTLER, Mo. (AP) — Falling debris killed a man Thursday night during a fire that destroyed the Bitner-Stark Pontiac agency building in Butler.

The victim, Laurin Paul Cunningham, 57, died of a crushed skull after a wall collapsed on him while he was trying to remove tools from the burning building.

Chavis named vice president of Lincoln U.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — John Chavis, a professor of history at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, was named vice president of Lincoln University here Friday.

Chavis also was director of the Division of Behavioral Science Research at Tuskegee.

James Frank, Lincoln University president, said Chavis would serve as the school's chief academic officer.

"He will coordinate activities such as the academic budget, academic appointments, academic innovation and planning and the evaluation of faculty and academic programs," Frank said.

William Brooks, who has been acting vice president, will continue as dean of instructional services.

Prior to joining Tuskegee Institute, Chavis was a history professor and assistant to the president for academic affairs at the University of Michigan.

Man's body found inside burned home

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — George Johnson, 53, died in a fire Thursday night at his home, where he lived alone.

Firemen said the blaze, of unknown cause, started in the living room of the one-story frame house. Johnson, a quarry worker, apparently was unable to open a door from the kitchen to an attached garage.

Rising middleman costs blamed for bread prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says rising middleman costs, not record farm prices for wheat, have accounted for most bread price increases since huge grain sales were made to the Soviet Union 18 months ago.

An analysis of bread costs, compiled by Agriculture Department economists, shows that a one-pound loaf sold in supermarkets in July 1972 for an average of 24.5 cents. Last November, the same size loaf cost 31.5 cents, the department said.

The increase of seven cents included a boost of 2.7 cents in the cost of all farm ingredients used. Of that, wheat flour, the main item, accounted for 2.2 cents.

But other markups, including margins for flour millers and bakers, added about 4.3 cents per loaf to the retail cost during the 18-month span, according to a study by the department's Economic Research Service.

The figures, however, did not indicate what may happen to bread prices in the next few months. Neither do they reflect sharp increases in wheat prices since last November.

Bakers say huge wheat exports are siphoning off reserves to such an extent that bread prices may soar, perhaps to $1 per 24-ounce loaf if shipments are not curbed until the new harvest is ready.

At that rate a 16-ounce loaf, used by the economists as the basic indicator, would cost about 65 cents in retail stores. That would be more than double the price of bread reported for last November.

Department officials, who are opposed to mandatory export control in any form, say there is enough wheat for flour through next June. They say there is no chance of bread prices going up as much as bakers say is possible.

The figures by the department, as yet unpublished, show the farm value of wheat in a one-pound loaf of bread actually declined from 5.6 cents last September, when wheat prices were at a near record, to 4.8 cents in November.

Meantime, according to the statistics, the retail price rose two cents per loaf. Other farm ingredients, such as shortening and milk products, added slightly to the rise but middleman costs accounted for 1.9 cents, the department said.

Bond's legislative package

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Here are highlights of Gov. Christopher S. Bond's legislative package he presented Thursday to the legislature:

—Amendments to the Corrupt Practices Act to provide disclosure of campaign contributions and expenditures before elections, as well as "realistic" limits on expenditures.

—Expansion of conflict-of-interest laws to require economic disclosure by public officials and to prevent state officials from representing clients for a fee before state agencies.

—Amendments to the state lobbyist law to require accurate disclosure of lobbyist activities. He says there are loopholes in the present law.

—Establishment of a bi-partisan commission with powers to investigate and enforce the lobbyist, campaign and conflict-of-interest laws.

—Increasing penalties for failure to file and filing of a fraudulent sales tax return.

—Making penalties for delinquent returns greater than the present interest rates on borrowing money.

—Giving the Revenue Department more money to replace fee agents in metropolitan areas with branch offices of the department.

—Turning the rest of the fee offices to local governments.

—Passing a government reorganization bill by the July 1 deadline.

—Establishment of a state port authority to regulate and promote commerce on the Missouri and Mississippi rivers.

—Passage of a law to help the Health and Mental Health division treat mental retardation at the earliest possible level.

—Bringing the criminal code up to date.

—Establishing a drug control agency within the highway patrol.

—Rewriting of the witness immunity laws so that testimony given by a witness could not be used against him.

—Providing for six months' supervision for all prisoners released from the Corrections Department instead of just those released on parole.

—Setting up regional adult and juvenile corrections centers in urban areas for use as rehabilitation centers.

—Repealing the holder-in-due course doctrine whereby the seller now can escape accountability for a faulty product because the contract has been transferred to a lending institution which cannot replace the product or make good on the service.

—Enactment of a no-fault auto insurance law that will pay medical bills and loss of wages without regard to who is at fault in the accident.

—More equitable distribution of state school funds.

—Ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

—Compliance with the 26th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution which gives all legal adult rights to persons 18 or over instead of the current Missouri majority age of 21.

Records are requested in school probe

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rep. Lloyd Baker, D-Moberly, has requested extensive copies of records from Moberly Junior College as part of an investigation of the school.

Baker was involved last month in a dispute with officials of the school after his wife was fired as college President Henry Norris' secretary.

Baker said at the time that Norris had warned him of the firing a few days before it occurred and suggested it could be avoided if the lawmaker would stop his probe into enrollment figures, courses and how state money is spent. Norris denied this.

Rep. James Russell, D-St. Louis, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said he would support Baker in the investigation if it revealed any irregularities which would involve his committee. Baker is a member of that committee.

He is also a member of a subcommittee investigating junior colleges.

The wettest spot on earth is said to be Mt. Waialeale, Hawaii, with an average annual rainfall of 460 inches.

DEATH NOTICES

Robert Eugene Sartin

WARSAW — Robert Eugene Sartin, 60, died at the Golden Valley Hospital in Clinton Thursday after suffering a stroke Monday.

He was born near here Feb. 23, 1913, son of Ed and Melinda Davis Sartin. On Dec. 22, 1933, he married Eudell Crabtree at Hermitage.

Mr. Sartin farmed in this area for several years and in 1960 moved here. He was employed for the past four years by the K and H Lime Co.

Survivors include his wife, Eudell, of the home; one son, Bobby Gene Sartin, Warsaw; two brothers, Lawrence Sartin, Clinton; and Herbert Sartin, Pleasant Hill; two sisters, Mrs. Lois Jones, Kansas City; and Mrs. Hazel Milander, Aurora, Ill.; and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Methodist Church here.

Burial will be in Shawnee Cemetery here.

Mrs. Virginia President

Funeral services for Mrs. Virginia President, 308 North Lamine, who died Tuesday morning at Bothwell Hospital, will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at Burns Chapel Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. W. L. Jackson will officiate.

Burial will be in Crown Hill Cemetery.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 8 p.m. Friday at the church.

Mrs. Elsie May Cook

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. — Funeral services for Mrs. Elsie May Cook, 64, who died Tuesday at a Santa Fe hospital, will be held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at the Holdren Funeral Chapel, Warrensburg.

Burial will be in Sunset Hills Cemetery.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 8 p.m. Friday at the funeral home.

Energy crisis blamed for loss of jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department today blamed the energy crisis for the loss of about 100,000 jobs last month. Some employers laid off workers in anticipation of fuel shortages.

In a supplement to its monthly employment report, the department said "employment reduction occurred in several specific industries which appear to be due to actual or anticipated shortages of gasoline."

Jobs in retail trade rose less than expected in December, the government said, with the seasonally adjusted decline of a 80,000 concentrated among automotive dealerships and service stations.

A strike by 30,000 grocery workers in California also accounted for the decline.

Employment in the service industry which usually rises in December also failed to materialize, primarily due to job layoffs in hotels, motels and entertainment — all hard-hit by the fuel shortage which has curtailed travel.

The department reported last week that unemployment in December rose from 4.7 to 4.9 per cent of the work force, but because of problems in gathering complete statistics said it was unable to give a complete report or pinpoint specific reasons for the increase.

Today's report included a year-end review of the nation's employment situation, which showed a number of persons holding jobs increased by 2.7 million over the year while the over-all jobless rate dropped steadily from a first quarter 1972 high of 5.8 per cent to 4.7 per cent in the fourth quarter of 1973 before starting its upward climb in November.

WINDSOR — Daniel W. Jasper, 52, Route 2, died at the Windsor Hospital at 7:10 a.m. Friday.

The body was taken to the Ewing Funeral Home, Sedalia.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Illinois man sentenced, put on probation

A former Sedalia man pleaded guilty in Pettis County Circuit Court Friday to a charge of issuing an insufficient funds check of more than $100.

Richard D. McCorkle, 40, Rock Island, Ill., was sentenced to two years under the custody of the State Department of Corrections and then placed on two years' probation.

McCorkle, the former manager of the Pacific Cafe, was charged with issuing an insufficient funds check of $134.81 on April 25 to a food service company in Chillicothe.

Prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming dismissed another felony check charge against McCorkle which was pending in Circuit Court. On this charge, he was alleged to have issued an insufficient funds check of $276.09 on April 30 to Roseland Meats Inc., 2506 West Main.

One of the terms of probation stipulated that McCorkle make restitution of all outstanding checks he issued in Sedalia, Fleming said.

In court activity Thursday afternoon, Daniel Dean Hamilton, 25, Ottoville, pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of less than 35 grams of marijuana, a misdemeanor.

Magistrate Court Judge Hazel Palmer fined Hamilton $50 and costs, sentenced him to 30 days in the county jail and then placed him on probation for six months.

Hamilton was arrested by the Highway Patrol Nov. 2 after he allegedly had in his possession one marijuana cigarette.

In other action, Larry Wyatt, 27, Buckner, waived his preliminary hearing and was bound over to Circuit Court on a charge of issuing an insufficient funds check of more than $100. He allegedly issued a check for $447.15 to Cecil's TV, 700 South Ohio, on Dec. 22.

Wyatt allegedly bought about $3,000 of merchandise Dec. 22 in Sedalia with insufficient funds checks, sheriff's officers said.

Two preliminary hearings for Charles Taylor, 24, 317 East Johnson, charged with two counts of sale of marijuana, were continued due to the weather.

Sextuplets born in South Africa

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — A 25-year-old woman gave birth to sextuplets today after a full nine months of pregnancy, and doctors gave the three boys and three girls a good chance of survival.

The weight of the babies born to Susan Rosenkowitz at Mowbray Maternity Hospital ranged from 2½ pounds to 4½ pounds. They were delivered by caesarian section.

Mrs. Rosenkowitz's husband, Colin, is a local businessman, and they have two other children, a 6-year-old daughter and a 2-year-old son.

The woman had taken one of the hormone fertility drugs which have made births of four or more babies a frequent occurrence in recent years. Sextuplets have been born to a number of women who have taken such drugs, but the largest number known to have survived to date are five of the six babies born in 1973 to Edna and Gene Stanek of Denver, Colo.

Mrs. Rosenkowitz had been confined to bed most of the time for the past two months and had been under the close observation and care of a team of specialists.

X rays indicated several weeks ago that she could expect six babies, and a muscle-relaxing drug called oriprinoline, developed in South Africa, was given her to stave off premature delivery so that the babies could continue to develop normally.

The X rays showed six well-formed babies, lying "like sardines," one source said, with 12 perfectly formed arms and legs clearly visible.

The first baby, a boy, was born at 8:02 a.m., followed half a minute later by a girl. The other four were delivered at half-minute intervals — a boy, a girl, a boy and finally a girl.

The hospital introduced tight security measures to protect Mrs. Rosenkowitz from intruders. For the past few weeks she has been on the top floor of the building in a room with one-way windows.

Mrs. Rosenkowitz regained consciousness soon after the operation and was reported in satisfactory condition.

Hospital authorities said her husband Colin waited outside the operating room while the babies were delivered. Afterwards he was said to be "relieved."

Doctors said all the babies were well formed though one was considerably smaller than the others. All had brown hair and all needed assistance to get breathing started.

Shooting spree leaves five dead, three hurt

DOVER, Del. (AP) — A shooting spree that left five persons dead and three wounded was triggered by an accused heroin dealer who was trying to systematically kill witnesses who could have testified against him in a drug case, a Delaware state official said today.

Authorities said the gunman killed two possible witnesses and a woman Thursday, then killed his girl friend. Three persons were wounded before the gunman apparently shot himself in the head, police said. The head wound was fatal.

The shooting spree and a high speed chase ranged across the state.

Police identified the dead suspect as Ronald W. Hofferker, 30, Dover.

Deputy Delaware Atty. Gen. Joseph A. Hurley called the murder spree a "systematic killing of witnesses."

Hofferker was arrested Dec. 19 on charges of selling heroin. He was to appear in court today for a probation violation hearing which could have ended in his being sent to prison for revocation of his probation for a 1971 drug conviction.

Hurley said two of the dead had been scheduled to be witnesses against Hofferker in an upcoming drug case, and that only hours before the killings Hofferker had purchased a box of handgun ammunition.

"He knew everybody he shot," said state police spokesman Angelo T. Citro.

The shootings began when Hofferker went to the Dover home of Glen Chmielewski. Police said Hofferker opened fire, injuring Chmielewski and killing John Pappas, 29, of Wyoming, Del., and Shirley F. Haggerty, 34, of Dover.

Police said he drove to another Dover home where he took Mrs. Richard Katcher, 25, as a hostage, and then drove south to Camden, Del., where he killed Mark Lovelace, 21.

Lovelace and Pappas had been scheduled to appear as witnesses against Hofferker, Hurley said.

Hofferker's car was spotted by state police near Middletown, and he was pursued by police until his car skidded out of control and into a field.

Delaware state trooper Billy Reep was shot in the shoulder during the chase and was wounded slightly.

Police said Mrs. Katcher told them Hofferker had shot her and Barbara Johnson, 19. The Johnson woman, found in the car used by Hofferker, was identified by police as Hofferker's girl friend. But they said they did not know when she joined Hofferker in the incident.

Mrs. Katcher was listed in fair condition.

Nation iced from Texas to New England

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Normal activity slowed to a crawl today as freezing rain, snow and sleet iced a broad stretch of the nation from Texas to New England.

Up to 10 inches of snow covered large areas from Kansas through the Ohio Valley into the interior Northeast.

To the south of the snow zone, freezing rain and drizzle brought fog, ice and hazardous conditions and flash flooding. Many schools were closed in Kansas and Missouri due to ice-glazed roads.

Subzero cold gripped the northern tier of states.

Numerous reports of deaths from overexertion in snow shoveling were reported Thursday — three in Massachusetts, three in Connecticut, one in Kansas.

Freezing rain lingered over New York City.

Tennessee was particularly hard hit by heavy rains with the Duck and Elk rivers at or above flood stage in southern Tennessee and the Cumberland river expected to reach flood stage at Nashville today.

Almost all schools were closed in metropolitan Kansas City today because of hazardous driving conditions and low temperatures of 5 to 10 degrees.

Heavy-snow warnings were posted from the lower Great Lakes region to southern Vermont. Winter-storm warnings were issued for parts of New Jersey, New York and Connecticut. Ice-storm warnings were up for Pennsylvania and freezing-rain warnings from Ohio into Pennsylvania.

Travel advisories were posted widely for the eastern half of the nation.

Among the few people jubilant about the winter storm were snow-starved ski resort operators in northern New England. One called it the "salvation" of the industry.

Warm weather spread comfort across a few Southern states Thursday and students in New Orleans were playing tennis and sunbathing.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from -32 at Havre, Mont., to 76 at Key West, Fla.

Full length of Highway 4 is opened

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Government convoys are traveling the length of Highway 4 between Cambodia's seaport and Phnom Penh for the first time in two months.

Military sources said 157 trucks with 41 trailers left Phnom Penh Thursday for the port of Kompong Som, 85 miles southwest of the capital. Trucks carrying ammunition began arriving in the capital during the night, and officials said a convoy was en route with rice, salt, beer and other foodstuffs.

Government troops broke a two-month Khmer Rouge blockade on the supply route last Sunday after weeks of stiff fighting. But before retreating the insurgents cut deep trenches into the roadbed, and government engineers had to repair them before traffic resumed.

Informed sources said the convoys were escorted by only a few soldiers and were not attacked on the way.

On the northwest side of Phnom Penh, five to seven miles from the city, government forces continued to attack insurgents entrenched near the Phnom Penh airport with napalm, artillery and armor.

The Cambodian command said its forces had stopped the drive by several thousand insurgents who last weekend threatened the airport and the city. But another battle was reported raging between insurgents and government troops on the banks of the Tonle Sap River near the district town of Prek Phnou, eight miles north of Phnom Penh.

Khmer Rouge fired three more 75mm shells into Phnom Penh from the west early today, killing a 10-year-old boy. It was the 12th rocket attack on the city since Dec. 23.

The command displayed six women at the daily news briefing and said they were members of a Khmer Rouge women's battalion captured Monday near the airport.

One of the prisoners, a 20-year-old, said she was taken from her village two months ago, kept in a camp with 10 other girls but given no military training. She said she was sent to the battlefield last weekend with about a hundred other girls.

Seminar on control of weeds scheduled

Farmers from Pettis and Morgan Counties are invited to attend a Johnson grass and wild cane seminar from 9:45 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Thursday at Maxine's Gourmet Restaurant.

The seminar is sponsored by the Pettis and Morgan County weed control boards and by the University of Missouri Extension Service.

Speakers will be regional Extension agents, representatives of chemical companies who manufacture weed control products and local farmers who have been successful in controlling the two weeds.

A free lunch will be served, courtesy of the chemical companies.

Want higher pay

Steel workers president I. W. Abel told a news conference Thursday his union would demand "very substantial" wage and fringe benefit increases in steel industry bargaining this year. He also said the union would seek full pay for workers furloughed due to the energy crisis. Abel declined to say how large an increase the union would demand.

Break-in at Commodity Foods Center

A break in at the Pettis County Commodity Foods Center, 118 North Lamine, was reported to police Thursday.

Mrs. Luann Eschbacher, manager, told police that she noticed the break-in when she arrived at work Thursday morning. The front door of the building had been broken open, police reported.

A soft drink machine was broken into and $4 was found missing.

Doty Moving and Storage, located in the same building, also reported a theft which occurred sometime Wednesday evening, police said.

Entry was gained through the front door of the commodity center and a calculator of undetermined value was taken, police reported.

In other police news, a theft at Sedalia Implement Co., 2205 South Limit, was reported Monday.

A spokesman for the company told police that sometime Jan. 5 two implement batteries valued at $12, and a gear box valued at $52 were taken.

The spokesman told police the items had been stored outside the building.

Joyce Dotson, 408 North Hurley, told police that all four tires on her car had been slashed. The tires were cut sometime between 2 a.m. and 10 a.m. Thursday, police reported.

Suit dismissed in circuit court

A $50,000 damage suit against the owner of the Nu-Way Cafe, 916 South Limit, was dismissed Friday in Pettis County Circuit Court.

The suit, filed by Andrew Mouser, 50, Palestine, Tex., alleged that Jack S. Newby, the defendant, choked Mouser in a reported scuffle at the cafe in July, 1972.

Mouser sought $35,000 for alleged physical injuries, medical expenses and loss of time and asked for an additional $15,000 in punitive damages.

Fire races through giant oil tanks

PORT NECHES, Tex. (AP) — A lightning-ignited fire swept through two giant crude oil tanks at a Mobil Oil Corp. tank farm here today. The fire was said to be contained by midmorning.

Mobil spokesman Roy Dickerson said a 70,000-gallon tank and a 20,000-gallon tank, each filled with crude oil, were still blazing with sporadic explosions but were believed to be contained at 9:30 a.m.

There were no reports of injuries.

One of the tanks exploded and sent a tower of flame into the air at about 3:25 a.m. when struck by a bolt of lightning. The blaze then spread to the other tank.

Flames and smoke were visible 10 miles away at Beaumont.

Port Neches is in southeast Texas.

MU budget request is $15 million higher

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dr. C. Brice Hatchford, president of the University of Missouri, asked the House Appropriations Committee Thursday to approve a $222.5 million budget for fiscal year 1974-75. The request includes about $110 million in state funds.

The budget request is an increase of over $15 million over the university's current budget.

Hatchford told the committee the university was hit with inflationary pressures and would require additional funds for the costs of a larger enrollment next year, a 6 per cent wage adjustment, an inflationary adjustment of 5 per cent and fixed costs.

"Even at that," he said, "we would have to absorb some inflationary impact." He said the 5 per cent inflation factor on non-salary items is insufficient to meet increased costs.

Rep. Les Langford, R-Springfield, questioned university representatives about what he felt were ambiguous listings under the university's listing of instructional budget items. Langford said he wanted to find out how many people listed in the instructional category were actually teaching.

Hatchford said the 6 per cent wage hike was the figure recommended by the governor. He called that proposed increase minimal.

Rep. Gladys Marriott, D-Kansas City, said many professors at the University of Missouri said the legislature had failed to appropriate money for salary increases.

She asked Hatchford to distribute a memorandum telling them that the money is appropriated by the legislature and the university decides how it will be distributed.

Hatchford agreed to the request.

Hatchford said 49,000 students were enrolled at the campuses of the University of Missouri and about 11,000 degrees were granted last year.

The committee also approved an emergency substitute bill to fund the House and Senate for the remainder of the special session. Total funds appropriated totaled $285,700.

Also included in the emergency bill was $8,358,506 for the Department of Welfare and $517,000 for the food stamp program.

Committee members also heard testimony on a dispute between the University of Missouri and the Division of Insurance.

The department has been critical of the university action in awarding an insurance contract to an Illinois firm which did not submit the low bid.

Testimony was postponed until Jan. 21 to give committee members an opportunity to review a report on the matter prepared by the university.

State Prisons Director George Camp and members of the Senate Appropriations Committee sat down for more than an hour Thursday night and discussed penal budgets and philosophy.

They agreed state corrections officers are some of the most poorly paid prison staff in the nation.

The officers average $448 monthly pay which is less than the monthly pay of the Jefferson City police and the $714 pay monthly of guards at the federal prison at Springfield, Mo., Camp said.

"The low salary of corrections officers has been absolutely unreal," said Sen. Robert A. Young, D-St. Ann. "We have to have the people employed at the institutions wanting to come to work."

Young said the Corrections Department's first fiscal 1974-75 budget request of $15 million was due several years ago. Camp said half of the workers at state prisons must hold second jobs to support their families.

He said a pay hike for his staff is a number one priority. The committee did not dispute him. He asked for a $12.6 million budget, about 15 per cent over his current appropriation.

Camp's goals for this year include in-service staff training, more staff decision making, an inmates' literacy program to combat the 18 per cent illiteracy rate in prisons, and a raise in inmate wages from a 4 cents per hour maximum to a $50 per month maximum.

"A man in confinement can find more reward from helping another inmate than in any other way," Camp said, about the literacy program where inmates would teach each other. He said he worked in similar programs which have succeeded.

Prison industries should offer jobs more like the "real workaday world," he said.

Committee Chairman Norman Merrell, D-Monticello, said, "Some of your objectives are tremendous," but worried about the costs of bringing prison job training up to date.

Camp said his budget will save the state money by preventing crime and recidivism. James Wilson of the state Park Board asked for a $352,000 increase in his current $2.2 budget with a staff 8 per cent pay raise as his top request.

He said the Park Department has a 40 per cent yearly turnover rate, paying average salaries of less than $5,000 per year.

Wilson asked for a 14 per cent pay raise for Park Board field employees and an 8 per cent increase for office staff. "We will sacrifice in any other category to get this," he said.

Wilson said park entrance fees, which were stopped last February, are not planned to be revived at present.

He said his goals include involving senior citizens in parks. He said a Columbia, Mo., senior citizens group had recently toured parks by bus.

He said rangers will take on naturalists' duties, parks may open for hunting in off-seasons and a camper reservation system may be started.

Boillot says milk fund statement is erroneous

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — James B. Boillot, state agriculture commissioner, said a news release issued by his office Thursday saying that he was requesting an attorney general's opinion on whether he must release milk price information supplied by private firms was erroneous.

Boillot said actually he had only written to the attorney general asking that an opinion be given by Sen. Paul Bradshaw, R-Springfield, be given priority.

"I should have caught this," Boillot said of the error in the news release.

Springfield Newspapers Inc., during an investigation of high milk prices, requested price information given by processors and milk distributors, citing the state's new law requiring open meetings and open records of public bodies.

Boillot has refused to release the information, saying regulations of his department forbid it. The Agriculture Department enforces the state's Unfair Milk Sales Practices Act.

Boillot said private firms do not want their competitors to have access to certain information. He said if the information must be released by his office "it will probably negate the chances of us enforcing that law."

He said he didn't think reliable information would be forthcoming from the firms if they knew it would be public information.

The news release was distributed by the Missouri Information Service, which handles press statements from the various state agencies.

A spirited attempt

English chemist C. J. Fell now uses sterilized whiskey, brandy and gin bottles to fill prescriptions. Because of the loss of coal due to a nationwide miners' strike, coupled with the oil shortage, England has been placed on a three-day week to conserve energy.

One of the industries affected is glassmaking — thus causing a shortage of bottles. Certainly Fell cannot be accused of not making a spirited attempt to remedy the situation.

Colleges in financial crisis

NEW YORK (AP) — The impact of the financial crisis in higher education will hit the public hardest, said Martin Meyerson, when a sizable university goes bankrupt.

Meyerson, president of the University of Pennsylvania, believes it will have the same shock effect as the failure of the Penn Central, which was not just the nation's biggest railroad but one of its largest corporations.

Many small colleges already have closed and some of the nation's larger institutions aren't very far from the same unfortunate fate. And the reasons are the same as those in business: income doesn't match outgo.

The Carnegie Commission on Higher Education predicted last year that by 1980 colleges and universities will face a $51 billion gap between income and expenditures, and the prospects for raising the money aren't good.

Americans, while they have some of the most prestigious universities, contribute a lower percentage of Gross National Product to support higher education than in many other developed nations.

If some universities go under, Meyerson believes, it could foretell problems for other voluntary institutions, including churches and church-related social programs, health care, museums, orchestras and other arts.

As with the energy and environmental problems, he said, the nation is failing to heed some of the overt signals emanating from the campuses, among them:

—Competition from state universities, especially in the Northeast, where some of the largest independent institutions find themselves competing with suddenly enlarged state universities.

—While voluntary giving looks pretty good, in Meyerson's view, many of the gifts today came with restrictions or limitations on their use.

—The middle-income family has been caught in a terrible crush. It costs about $5,000 a year to send a student to a school of Penn's stature, and many middle-income families have two youngsters in college simultaneously.

—Operating expenditures are rising. Payrolls are the big expenditure for universities and it is difficult to cut them. Automation might aid a corporation, but it is less likely to be of great value to a university.

—The college population has ceased growing, studies show. That means the growth of tuition income will slow. And for colleges geared for big enrollments that can mean serious troubles.

Since the bulk of university income is from tuitions, Meyerson believes that a substantial loan program for students, perhaps government insured in the manner of some home mortgage loans, would help immediately.

Abortion stand irks columnist's readers

WASHINGTON — More years ago than I like to remember, when at age 19 I got my gold stripe as a Navy ensign, I was given this bit of advice: "In the ship's wardrobe, never discuss religion, politics or specific women."

I got through those Navy days by following that advice rather faithfully, since I claimed no excess of religion, and knew nothing about politics or women, specific or otherwise.

Nothing brings out the wrath, or the beastliness, of people more than a column on abortion or prayer in the schools. Yes, prayer in the schools is even more emotional an issue than sex education in the schools.

But abortion? I never dreamed I could be called "murderer" in so many different ways until I wrote that column criticizing the "anti-abortion fanatics" who are so certain of their view of God's will that they want a constitutional amendment outlawing abortion.

It is not pleasant to be called a murderer when you have killed nothing livelier than some vintage '68 illusions about Richard Nixon. But, alas, 48-year-old columnists do not have the same luxury of avoiding controversy as 19-year-old ensigns. So I am destined to go on asserting my view that, while I respect the right of millions of people to believe that abortion is a sin, they have no right to codify their religious views to the detriment of other millions who disagree — or who believe that to saddle a miserable young woman with an unwanted child, who will grow up in wretched abuse, is to make a mockery of both goodness and godliness.

Yet, in all that outpouring of mail condemning and praising my column, one stands out. It was from a man who argues that I, as a syndicated columnist, have an unfair advantage. He seems to think that I abuse power when I write in favor of abortion. Well, since I have sprinkled the Watergate era with columns deploring the abuse of power, I don't want to feel guilty of that. It will scarcely satisfy the antiabortionist people, but I offer herewith one of the more vigorous yet civil exceptions to my column.

Sharon Heaton of Bay Village, Ohio, wrote:

"Dear Mr. Rowan: I am one of those 'anti-abortion fanatics' you refer to in your column 'Abortions aid poor blacks in N.Y.' I don't understand how a compassionate, intelligent person like yourself can suggest that ANYONE is aided by destroying new life. The 'unwanted pregnancy' you speak of is a human child.

"I think you are an angry man, and in your anger and frustration over the plight of the poor in this country you have grasped at abortion as a solution to their problems. This 'worthwhile' right to an abortion is in reality a license to kill a developing human being. A civilized nation cannot afford to grant this so-called right to women.

"Mr. Rowan, even if abortion did solve the problem of poverty I don't think you're the type of person who would say 'the end justifies the means.' The crime which those who participate in abortion commit is not one of 'refusing to have a baby' but of killing a nascent human being.

"As a syndicated columnist read by so many people, you have, I think, the responsibility of seriously investigating the pro-life side of the story. I'm enclosing one article and there's all kinds of pro-life literature but you'll have to look for it — the media is only interested in the pro-abortion angle."

Morning thoughts on DST

By DOUG KNEIBERT

As I was staring at the moon while driving to work Wednesday morning, I got to thinking about fundamental questions, like Daylight Saving Time.

Actually, I prefer to think of it as Night Saving Time, since what we are doing is saving up all that good nighttime that we now miss in the evenings and giving it to you on cold Monday mornings. As the environmentalists are fond of saying, there's no such thing as a free lunch.

Our leaders in Washington keep telling us that this is the way to save energy. Yet I have already noticed that it takes twice as much energy for me to get out of bed at 7:20 a.m. CDST as it did when it was plain old 7:20 a.m. CST.

Not to mention the energy that is expended in stumbling around in the dark looking for robe and slippers, alarm clock switches, and door handles.

Although I haven't done an actual kilowatt count, I suspect that in my house we are using every bit as much electricity to see what we're doing in the morning as we did to see what we were doing at night. Maybe more.

If this is the typical homeowner's experience, multiply that by many millions and what have we gained? But the benefits will be mainly felt in business and industry, says Washington. Thus people are bumping into things in the dark in every household in the land for the benefit of the Amalgamated Gasket Company.

Well, anyway, these were the kinds of thoughts that were running through my head Wednesday as I waited for the heater and defroster to start working — admittedly a bad time to feel patriotic.

But the moon WAS really lovely.

Chamber of Commerce President Jake Siragusa sent me the following letter, which was received at his office. Now it's not of the import of Watergate or the energy crisis, but I do admire a man who can speak his peace about what's bothering him:

Year: 1909. Event: Big name circus. Procedure: Big parade from showgrounds to downtown district. Many cage wagons containing wild animals, followed by elegantly-costumed performers on horses. Then elephants, zebras, other large non-ferocious animals. Then clowns, several bands seated on top of the cage wagons. Then finally the ever-famous steam caliope, smoke coming from the stack and played by a beautiful woman. Result: excitement at fever pitch, with every kid for miles around (and) many rural people in town. Merchants doing triple amount of business.

Big town U.S.A. Year: 1973 or 1974. Event: Scaled down version of mediocre circus, less parade, animal cages, horse-drawn wagons or caliope. Location: some large municipal building, seats located so far from arena that much of the interest of spectators is lost, or confused. Result: no downtown crowds, no closeness between performers and citizens.

This, coupled with powderless Fourth of July, is killing Americanism. Wake up you sanctimonious old fogies, before it is too late. Restore old time circus parades and Fourth of July or else start raising money to buy a monument to our old U.S.A. Give the kids a break, instead of swimming pools and ball parks. It will be cheaper and make better citizens out of them in 1985, instead of longhaired non-intelligent punks like we have on TV.

Glad I was here when it happened. Ringling Brothers, Setts-Plato, Hageneck-Wallace, Miller Brothers 101 Ranch, and Colonel Zack and Charlie Mulhall, and Buffalo Bill. I saw them all, and all I have to say about today's showmen — there are none to compare with the old days.

Unmerry England

England seems to be settling deeper each day into an economic morass from which quick recovery may be impossible.

Nearly 1,000 railway engineers walked off the job Thursday, leaving London with virtually no commuter service. The engineers are demanding higher wages.

Although the trains were running again Friday, the prospect of further railroad strikes loomed.

This comes on top of a coal miners' overtime ban that has cut the nation's energy supply by 40 per cent. Nonessential businesses and industries have been on a three-day week since Jan. 1 as a result, which experts think will mean a 20 per cent drop in production this month.

Unemployment is approaching 1.5 million out of a total work force of 25 million, two thirds of it a direct result of recent slowdowns.

Great Britain's relatively small but active Communist party is watching all of this with intense interest, as are other far-left fellow travelers. It's the kind of chaos that Marxists are expert at engineering and then exploiting to their own benefit.

Of course England has muddled through similar crises in the past with her democratic institutions intact. From both the political and economic standpoint, the free world has a big stake in how England will meet its present problems.

Webster off-key

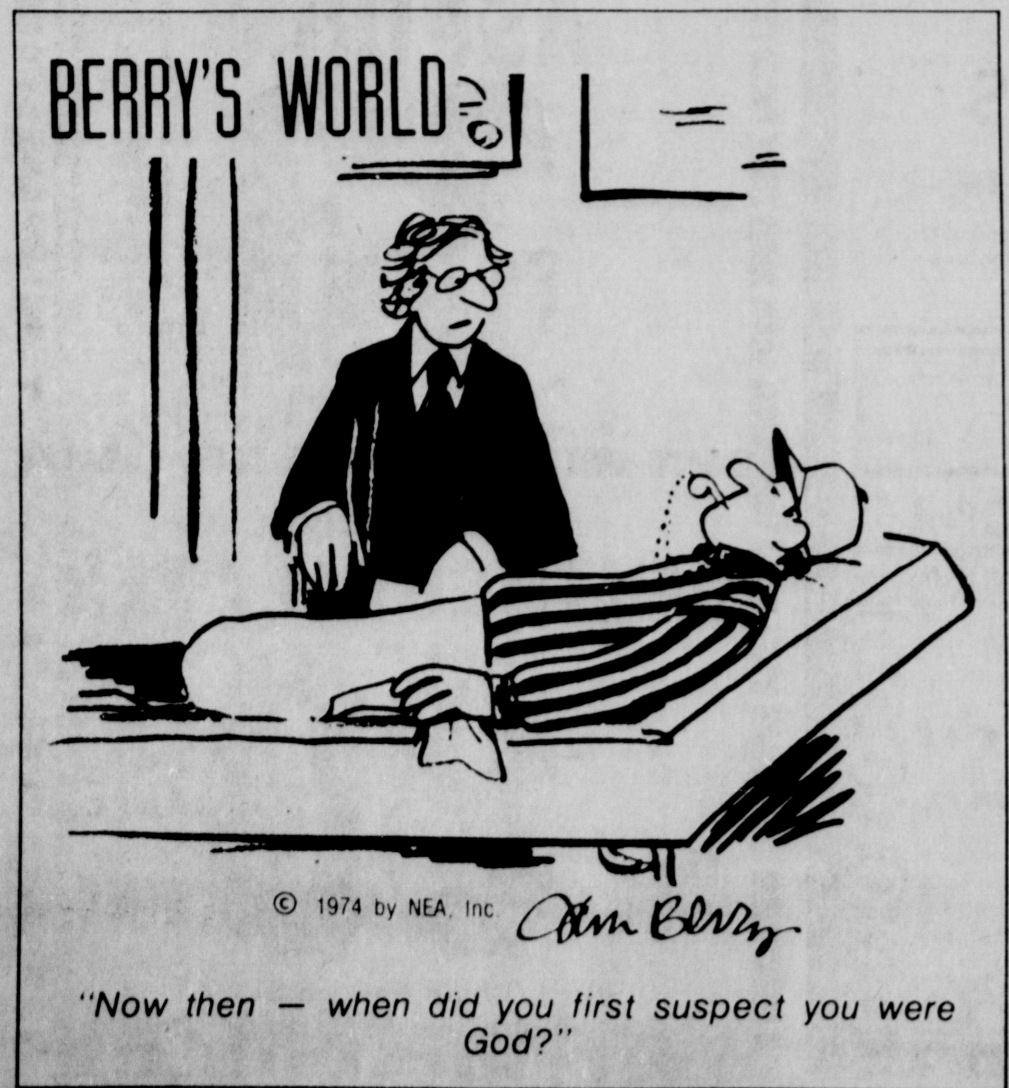

Sen. Richard Webster (R-Carriage) sounded a sour note at hearings Wednesday in Jefferson City on the State Fair budget by claiming that the Fair runs up "hellacious" bills each year for grandstand entertainment that could be gotten cheaper.

The senator said the Fair should use more state talent, especially from his Southwestern Missouri district, instead of Nashville "clowns" and Hollywood "clodhoppers."

With all due respect to Senator Webster, he's clearly off-key on this one. His hometown stars may be big in the 32nd District, but they're not the kinds of names that can pack a grandstand. And the caliber of entertainment is a big factor in overall Fair attendance.

We wonder when Senator Webster last heard some of the Fair stars he so freely criticizes?

Come on up, Senator, and see for yourself.

No oil bonanzas from Saudi fields

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The final lifting of the Arab oil embargo, according to secret reports from the Saudi Arabian fields, won't bring the promised gush of oil.

The reports have been shown to us by sources inside Aramco, the multinational, multibillion consortium which developed the Saudi fields. There are four Aramco partners — Exxon, Mobil, Standard of California and Texaco — each an oil giant in its own right.

In these reports, which have been withheld from both the Saudi and U. S. governments, Aramco engineers have warned that "severe technical difficulties" have hampered production.

Their best estimate is that production will be "stabilized" at no more than 7.5 million barrels a day. This is less than half the 20 million barrels that the Saudis promised if their political terms were met.

But the real scandal, if the engineering reports are correct, is that the production foul-up was caused by Aramco's greed.

For three decades, Aramco has been pumping oil from under the sands of the sheikdom and paying the Saudis mere alms.

Not only are the fabulous, one-sided oil concessions of the past now at an end, but the company fears that its whole Saudi operation will be taken over by the government. The secret Aramco memos are full of references to "possible nationalization" and "unstable political conditions."

A year ago, the memos predicted nationalization would come "well before 1980." More recent memos warn that the takeover may be only two or three years away.

Aramco, therefore, began draining every drop of oil that could be sold from its Saudi wells. The daily production was increased from 6.5 million barrels in 1972 to nine million barrels in 1973. The company had set a 9.3-million-barrel production goal by the end of the year.

The corporate objective, according to the secret memos, was to increase production from existing fields without spending any more money than necessary on developing new wells.

The rush to get the oil out caused technical problems. As early as last June, engineers warned that production was too fast. Their secret reports tell of "huge pressure drops" and "erratic production."

The hurried production, according to the reports, created "tremendous volumes" of natural gas, which simply had to be burned off. At a steady production rate, the reports state, the gas could be compressed and reinjected into the formation.

This would cost a little development money, but it would increase the pressurization and permit more oil to be pumped from existing wells.

However, the documents make clear that Aramco is not interested in preserving petroleum for the Saudi government to expropriate but only in removing as much as possible before nationalization takes place.

There is no shortage of oil under the Saudi sands. The barren, baked desert virtually floats on a sea of petroleum. The engineering reports, indeed, are highly critical of Aramco's management for failing to conduct adequate "development drilling" and "reservoir analysis."

But plainly, the company is unwilling to invest substantial sums in developing Saudi Arabia's vast oil reserves unless the government makes the risk worthwhile.

One memo estimates that it would cost Aramco $1 billion to increase production. The money is needed for drilling new wells and building more pipelines and storage tanks. Even if this vast investment is made, according to the memo, no substantial increase in production could be expected before 1977.

The Aramco documents show that the company, meanwhile, is concentrating on draining the fields it has already developed. Only 14 of the 20 known fields are now being worked, according to the engineering reports, and substantial production is coming from only 12. Geological surveys indicate that many more fields merely await exploration and development.

When the Saudis offered to increase production to 20 million barrels daily, they evidently didn't know about the technical difficulties that have developed. Their suspicions, apparently, were aroused. But the secret reports indicate they were kept in the dark about the seriousness of the troubles.

This is vigorously denied by an official spokesman for the oil consortium. He assured us that the company is developing Saudi Arabia's oil reserves as fast as feasible and that the technical problems haven't been serious. He specifically denied that the company's carelessness will limit future production to about 7.5 million barrels daily, without heavy investments.

We quoted some of the memos to him including one which declared the "reservoir pressures" fluctuated so greatly that the engineers estimated the daily production would be held at "no more than 7.5 million barrels."

This memo, said the spokesman, was "all wet, completely erroneous." The welfare of the West may depend, to a large extent, on who's telling the truth — the secret memos or the official spokesman.

For Saudi Arabia is the Western world's oil jugular.

Objections held to minimum

By DICK KLEINER
HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — David Karp has become a specialist in TV lawyer shows. He wrote many episodes for The Defenders, created The Storefront Lawyers and created and produces James Stewart's new show, Hawkins, for CBS.

All that quasi-legal experience has given him some strong feelings about lawyer shows. For one thing, he objects to objections.

"In real trials," he says, "there are objections every two minutes, on the average. If you've ever been to a real trial you know how they slow things down. I've told my writers they can have only one objection per show."

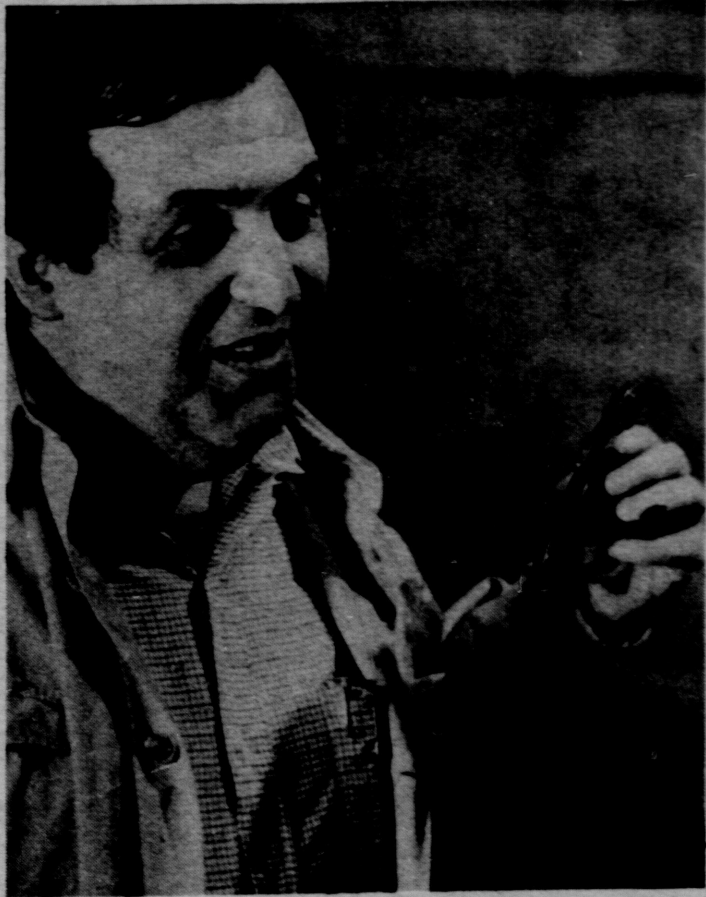

Karp points out a difference between The Defenders and Hawkins. In the former show, he says, all the issues were so clouded with motivation ("This boy isn't guilty, society is guilty") that sometimes the viewer wasn't sure who was guilty.

"With Hawkins," he says, "you always know the guilty party."

He has a complete dossier on Hawkins, the man he created, and says he knows how Hawkins feels on every issue of our time.

"Although it will never come up on the show," he says, "Hawkins, politically, is a Jeffersonian Democrat. I know his position on everything from capital punishment to mercy killing. Some episodes will concern themselves with how he feels on those issues."

Karp, a New Yorker originally, always wanted to be a writer but never wrote until after his military service in World War II. While attending CCNY (now City University of New York) he wrote radio continuity for

David Karp

WNYC. He moved from that into other radio shows and then into television. He's also written novels and movies.

He prefers writing for television. He thinks that, in some ways, it is more rewarding than writing feature films.

"There are two reasons for that," he says. "First, writing for TV is like taking a Polaroid picture — you see the results right away. In the feature area, it may be two years before you see what you've done."

"And, second, you have more control when you write for TV than when you write for features. In TV, there's no time for the studios to meddle around. When you write a feature you have so much time that the studio begins to say things like, 'Well, let's change this. Let's make the hero a woman. Let's make everybody black,' and things like that."

"But in TV, you only have a couple weeks between when you write it and when it goes into production and that's not enough time for meddling. I like to have control over what I write so I like that angle."

When he first created Hawkins, they said "Let's find a young Jimmy Stewart" to play the role. But there is no such thing so they got the old Jimmy Stewart. Everybody's happy — including viewers.

they had escaped any major disaster by going home, however.

She says the family used to try and experiment with ESP, especially when Jock was due home to take them somewhere and he was late. They would all sit there and think, "Jock, come home now." It never worked.

Maybe that's why she wasn't too sure she wanted to do a series with an ESP gimmick. After her big hit, The Flying Nun, went off the air four years ago, she turned down many series offers.

She says she wanted some time to grow, both as an actress and a woman. She did many TV movies, the ones that came along and offered her chances to try new things, to experiment. She also got married (to writer Steve Craig, now associate producer on her show) and had two children, Peter, almost 4, and Eli, 2.)

"I feel that now," she says, "I am a much better actress and a more rounded human being than I was in The Flying Nun days."

The offers came in each year. Then there was the chance to do The Girl With Something Extra. The ESP gimmick worried her but they reassured her.

"They told me," she says, "that the ESP thing will not be intrusive. In fact, we've done some episodes with only one or two vague references to it. It's basically a show about a young married couple and their problems, which is what I wanted to do — after all, I'm part of a young married couple. Being married is the most difficult thing anybody ever has to do."

Puts emphasis on acting

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Kids born in black ghettos can develop in many ways. Some get religion, some get crime, some get sports. Hilly Hicks got acting.

He also got religion. Hicks, one of the stars of CBS' new series, Roll Out!, is something more than an actor. He is a minister. He works at both careers.

In the ghetto, he says, he says, there is a slang word — Jones — which is another way of saying "habit." Thus, he says, some ghetto-dwellers have "the drug Jones," some have "the whiskey Jones." He early contracted a virulent case of both "the preaching Jones" and "the acting Jones."

Given a choice between the two — a major pulpit or a major acting part — he says he'd opt for acting. It is the stronger of the Joneses.

In his ministerial work, he says, he is more evangelical than pastoral.

"I want to save people rather than souls," he says.

His father was a preacher, a Baptist minister here in Los Angeles, so he comes by his theological calling honestly. He began acting as a boy in community theater when a producer heard of his record as a seven-year-old evangelist. He's been working at it ever since.

He was the student body president and valedictorian of his high school class. He has his degree in English literature from Occidental College. And then he attended the School of Theology at Claremont.

Through it all, he acted. He did many parts on many TV shows and several movies. Roll Out!, however, is his first TV series and he's happy about the whole thing.

He wasn't even born when the Red Ball Express, whose exploits are dramatized on the program, had its finest hour in World War II. He tried to do some research into the unit but says there really has been very little written about it.

He lucked out, however. He discovered that his Uncle Ed had served with the Red Ball Express.

ESP skips Sally Field

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — It seemed appropriate to ask Sally Field, who stars in the new NBC series about ESP, The Girl With Something Extra, how her own ESP was.

She says she has none. "I get hunches sometimes," she says, "but I guess like most of us I don't act on them. Maybe I should but I don't."

She remembers how her famous stepfather, Jock Mahoney (a Tarzan), had it — or claimed he did. She's beginning to suspect that maybe he didn't have it but used it as an excuse.

"We would be going somewhere, the whole family," she remembers, "like once we were on a boat going to Catalina. And he suddenly said he had a vision or something that things were going to go wrong. He turned the boat around and headed for home. That kind of thing happened often."

They never learned that

TV scout reports

The next Portrait (that's the David Victor-David O'Connell-produced series which has dealt with episodes in the lives of Edward VIII, Pope John and Vince Lombardi) will be about Harry Truman and will focus on his early days as a Missouri politician.

David Victor, the executive producer, says he wants a small, feisty actor to play Truman and says he would like the actor to be Jack Lemmon.

Dick Cavett says he knows a bore who prides himself on speaking his mind. The problem is, Dick says, is that "it so limits his conversation."

Part of the recent Carol Lawrence-Robert Goulet special was taped at their retreat in Jackson Hole, Wyo., which is so high in the mountains that during snowstorms they have to have food flown in.

"The cabin is so primitive and isolated," says Carol. "that we not only eat by candlelight, but also by helicopter."

Dwayne Hickman and Bob Denver, who used to play Dobie Gillis and his buddy Maynard respectively, are both touring in "Star-Spangled Girl." Neil Simon's comedy, Dwayne is doing it in Disney World in Florida and Bob is playing in St. Louis.

It's too bad that CBS has chosen to censor a segment of The New Dick Van Dyke Show. Carl Reiner has been particularly outspoken about his feelings. He says that he will not work for the network in a creative or production capacity again unless they show the episode, filmed many months ago.

The show is very funny, extremely tasteful and certainly innocent, especially in the light of some of the stuff that TV gets away with. Very simply, Dick, who has been making a western in Arizona, returns home earlier than expected. Daughter Annie begins acting very strangely and it turns out she has walked into her parents' bedroom, thinking only her mother was there, and seen her parents making love.

There is nothing graphic here but merely a treatment of a very real situation.

Dick Cavett said the band on his show has been named the Sound of the Seventies by an underground publication. "They said the band sounded like all the members were in their 70s," Dick says.

Victor Borge says he gets confused when he is invited to a "come as you are" party. "How can I come as I'm not?" he wonders.

Producer Gary Smith, who spends six months of the year in England, where he and partner Dwight Hemion turn out specials like Julie Andrews' recent ABC shows, says he has finally conquered driving on the left side of the road in England. But he has a problem. "Now when I'm in the U.S. I find myself driving on the wrong side."

Does the world need a grownup Dobie Gillis? Robert Klein, TV vice-president at 20th Century-Fox is talking with writer Joel Kane and director Rod Amateau to tape a Dobie Gillis (before an audience) with Dwayne Hickman returning to his role, but just a wee bit more mature.

Victor Borge says a neighbor asked if he minded if he gave the Borge dog a soupbone. "I said no," Borge said, "as long as you don't mind if, when he's done with it, we dig it up."

A record-breaking number of stars made Christmas great for the handicapped and mentally retarded children and senior citizens at Rancho Los Amigos, a county facility.

Two busses unloaded the likes of Mary Tyler Moore, Ted Knight, Lee Meriwether, Lily Tomlin, Dennis Weaver, McLean Stevenson, Betty White and Allen Ludden, John Dehner and the entire cast of General Hospital, among others. A group, headed by Paul Winchell and Bill Barty, and including Indian actors like Jay Silverheels, Iron Eyes Cody and George American Horse, showed up in full ceremonial regalia to entertain the kids. The group brought 150 Christmas stockings filled with gifts and 120 individually wrapped gifts for the kids and 300 gifts for the older folk. Over $2,000 in cash was donated by members of the Hollywood Chapter of the Television Academy for the party.

The Girl With Something Extra has been on a production hiatus since Thanksgiving, but John Davidson can't tell. The star of the series has been to New York to host the Macy's Parade. He made guest appearances on Tonight, Hollywood Squares and subbed for ailing Sammy Davis Jr. and Vicki Carr in club engagements. He is also recording an album for Warner Brothers Records.

The National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences (it gives out the Emmy Awards) held its annual ball honoring Tandem Productions and Norman Lear and Bud Yorkin for their hit shows, All in the Family, Sanford and Son and Maude. The stars, writers, producers and directors were there with three exceptions. Rod Parker, who produces Maude, couldn't be there, it was announced from the stage. Carroll O'Connor and Rob Reiner were not there and also were never mentioned, an oversight which did not go unnoticed among the large black tie crowd.

But what people will be talking about for a long time was the disgraceful behavior of Bill Macy, who plays Maude's husband. He jumped up on stage during the proceedings and drew boos from some in the audience for his four letter words and lewd actions.

Flip Wilson has a good attitude about fans who ask him questions in public places. Flip, who will host the Ringling Bros. and Barnum &

Bailey Circus TV special on NBC-TV in mid-February (the 14th to be exact), says, "It doesn't bug me when people ask me all kinds of questions. You see — they didn't know that I'd be there. But I knew I'd be there. With that realization, I'm never annoyed by fans."

Tom Snyder, who does NBC-TV's very late night (or very early morning) show, Tomorrow, never uses cue cards. Also, his opening introduction and closing of the show are strictly ad lib.

Talk about managed press! Here's a memo from CBS: "EDITORS: Please note per All in the Family producer John Rich, the following subjects are considered taboo for use in your storylines. We thank you in advance for your cooperation in this matter. "Edith's Christmas Story" — Please do not make any reference to Edith's physical problem, be it direct or implied.

"Mike and Gloria Mix It Up" — Please do not make any reference to the extra-marital escapades mentioned by Mike and Gloria."

Memo To Readers: Please do not read the above!

Leonard Nimoy does his voice tapes for the Dr. Spock character in the animated version of Star Trek on the road while he has been doing the play, "Full Circle." (He's now in New York with it.) When he was playing in Washington he stayed at the Watergate Hotel and mailed this letter to Filmation executive Bob Chenault: "I'm sending the tapes under separate cover. If not received within three days, check the White House. They may have a copy."

Speaking of Nimoy, he plans to do a stock tour next summer, playing Prof. Henry Higgins in "My Fair Lady."

The black tie audience at the taping of the recent ABC late night special which saluted the 50th anniversary of Warner Brothers films got a better off-camera show than viewers did. There were some points of criticism about the on-camera show, notably in the editing of the film clips. For instance, in a segment illustrating a few of the 142 Oscar-winning Warner's films the scene showing Vivian Leigh's winning performance focused most of the time on Marlon Brando's face.

But hostess Bette Davis, between takes, was a great show. For instance, she looked off into a mirror which was part of the decor and said, "Please, God, no other woman will have to look into those mirrors. When I first saw my reflection I thought, 'All that money at La Costa for nothing.' I didn't look that bad in the dressing room."

Later she looked into the audience and asked how many of the men present had rented their black tie outfits.

"You all look marvelous," she said. "It's nice to see people all dressed up. It will probably be another 50 years before we see another audience dressed like this."

When she was asked to do a line for the third time, she said, "They're testing to see if I get the part."

Jack Warner was present. When the taping concluded Bette said, "If you want any more takes, I'm leaving." Then she looked at Warner and said, "You've heard that before, haven't you, Jack?"

Which reminded her of a story. She was having a feud with Warner, she said, "and he called me into his office to say he had bought a new novel for me. I said, 'I bet it's a pip' and I flounce out and went to England for a year."

The novel was "Gone With the Wind."

They had a big affair for a group of visiting English TV reporters the opening night in Los Angeles of "That Championship Season" preceded by a cocktail party and followed by a dinner and lots of ABC stars were present.

I talked to a very bitter Monty Hall. The Let's Make A Deal man was upset at the publisher of his forthcoming autobiography. They took 50 pages out of it — he made them put them back — and used an old photo on the jacket — he made them redo the jacket. Hall says if it weren't that it would hurt his collaborator, Bill Libby, he'd junk the whole thing.

Diana Rigg's explanation of why Diana was a failure:

"It all starts with the word, doesn't it? And the scripts were just not good enough. I think, with time, they would have improved but there wasn't any time."

Diana says when she grew up in Yorkshire actresses were still considered "scarlet women." Despite that stigma, she decided early she wanted to be an actress.

"For a few years," she says, "they all thought it was just a good joke. They all called me 'Dame Diana.' But when it became apparent that I was serious about it my parents wisely went along with me, with love."

There will be a series this second season based on the movie, "The Cowboys." But John Wayne won't be in it and there is still a question as to whether or not there will be a comparable father figure.

Producer David Dortort tells me he is pushing for one. He didn't make the pilot which had no such character.

"And it left a hole big enough to drive a 10-ton truck through," Dortort says. "I told them I thought we needed a Wayne figure. I hope they go along with me."

Remember when Mike Minor and Linda Kaye Henning, both then on Petticoat Junction, were married? Everyone thought they made such a handsome couple. The marriage is long since over and now I hear disturbing reports about Mike.

A friend spotted him looking terribly unkempt and untogether at a golf tournament somewhere in the south. Minor said he does nothing these days, except play golf.

Here's how the energy crisis is affecting Hollywood stars. Dan Rowan and Dick Martin did something for Ford, who returned the favor by giving them each a Mark IV.

Rowan drove his around a few days, calculated that it got about nine miles to the gallon, and requested the company take it back — and give him an economical Capri instead.

Rock Hudson was very depressed recently. He had worked hard on an episode of McMillan and Wife which he thought had turned out exceptionally well.

"But it was on opposite 'Airport,'" Rock says, "and it got knocked out. All that work for nothing."

He was told that, in our huge country, even a low rating represents millions of viewers, and that was some consolation.

Harvey Korman was talking about Neil (Doc) Simon, who turns out hit after hit on Broadway. Korman believes that there are just as many good writers on TV.

"Simon writes TV comedy in the guise of a Broadway show," says Carol Burnett's top banana. "Each week, we have as many good laughs on our show as in one of his shows. The only thing is that he has the prestige."

Television shows are not as haphazard as you might think. Take ABC's Kung Fu. In that program, Caine (David Carradine) seems to be wandering aimlessly through the west. But his wanderings are far from aimless.

The show's staff plots his travels on a map from an ancient atlas. They had him start in the Nevada desert, where the Chinese coolies were helping to build the railway. From there he went west to California and he's currently somewhere in Arizona. They figure that, as of the beginning of '74, he had walked some 1,500 miles.

Incidentally, if you're a keen observer, you may have noticed some changes in Caine's apparel as the show progresses. These changes have been at the insistence of David Carradine.

The first thing that happened was that Caine discarded his shoes and now walks barefoot. And in a recent episode, he threw away his hat and from now on will be bare-headed.

Greg Garrison used the time off between Dean Martin shows, which he produces, to film the new series, Music Country, U.S.A., which was the surprise replacement for NBC Follies. Garrison signed some of the top country music stars for the new one, including Lynn Anderson, Donna Fargo, Ray Stevens, Jerry Reed, Charlie Rich and Doug Kershaw.

Gary Crosby, who has become a regular on NBC's Chase series, gets a little tired when people figure he doesn't have to work. Most of the public feel he must be rich, being Bing Crosby's son. But he isn't.

When his mother, Dixie, died she left him and his brothers a trust fund. But she made her will many years ago and didn't consider what inflation might do. His trust fund gives him about what the average secretary makes.

With Diana over and done with, Diana Rigg is off on a much-needed vacation — five or six months of doing nothing. She says she feels the need to "replenish" herself. She and her husband, Menachem Gueffen, will go to England to see her family, Israel to see his and then to the island retreat off Spain Diana has had for a long time.

The animated Star Trek has certain advantages over the old live version, according to producer Gene Roddenberry. On one recent episode, Kirk and Spock were turned into aquatic creatures, complete with gills. To have done that with real actors would have been possible, but it would have taken a lot of time and money. But, in animation, all it took was a stroke of the artist's pen.

Anderson escapes personal 'prison'

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — For a long time, Richard Anderson was a prisoner of his own youthful appearance.

Anderson, who is currently playing Oscar Goldman, the man who directs Lee Majors in The Six Million Dollar Man, was one of the last of the MGM discoveries. He was at that once-great studio around 1950 when it was still flourishing. He played juvenile roles, because he looked young.

Over the years he's been troubled by his continuing youthful appearance. The Six Million Dollar Man is his fifth or sixth series. Each one has meant a little bigger and a little better part for him.

In each one, he's portrayed a man a bit older than in the one before.

"I used to spend my time," Anderson says, "dreaming of the day when I would look older so I would get better parts. Very few good parts are written for young men but there are great parts for older men."

He still is youthful-looking.

Richard Anderson

Now there is a trace of maturity in his face and his hair is thinning just a trifle. It all helps, he believes and now he's able to snag some of those meatier roles.

Of course, human nature being what it is, now that he's beginning to look a touch older, he's worried about keeping in shape. So currently he's gone big on physical fitness, and does a lot of exercising — hiking, cross-country skiing.

It might seem like casting against type, to get a man like Anderson to play a character named Oscar Goldman.

Anderson, with his Wasphish name and Wasphish appearance, is hardly the sort you'd think of to play an ethnic character.

But, strangely, Anderson is Jewish, despite his non-Jewish name and appearance. And Anderson is his real name and has been the family name for generations. He is descended from Scandinavian Jews, with a dash of Russian and Polish thrown in.

He grew up wanting to act. Born in New Jersey and raised in New York he would frequent movie houses as a boy. He says his mother let him see anything he wanted. Those were the good old days when parents could do that without worrying about the film's content.

"I saw all the great ones," he says, "and it was wonderful background. All I could think of was one day being an actor. And I'm still fascinated with acting."

But, like many actors, he now has bigger ambitions. He would like to produce and perhaps direct his own films. That's in the future, however. At the moment, he's happy acting.

He likes the series and he likes the part he plays. It's his long-awaited chance to play a mature part.

TV role similar to her real life

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Vincent Gardenia and Betty Garrett have joined the All in the Family show this season, playing the new neighbors of the Bunkers, the Lorenzos. In real life, Gardenia is a bachelor but Miss Garrett is really Mrs. Larry Parks. There are some similarities between the Lorenzo family and the Parks family.

On the CBS show, Gardenia plays a man who is domestic, likes to cook. Miss Garrett plays his wife, a lady who is supposedly mechanically inclined.

"That's sort of the way it is in our family," Betty Garrett says.

She says that Larry was always the better cook, something of a gourmet chef. When their two sons were growing up, Larry did most of the cooking.

When their oldest son, Garrett, or Gary, was about five, he went to visit a friend one day. And he came home to report that he had seen the funniest thing at his friend's house, the mother did all the cooking.

Betty and Larry Parks have been married for 29 years, proving that long and successful marriages are possible in Hollywood with two actors involved. She says they were able to avoid the jealousy-over-career thing because their careers went in different directions.

For 18 years of their marriage, they lived in a small, five-room house, with only one bathroom. It was far from the usual Hollywood star mansion. Betty says their business manager kept warning them to be careful.

"He kept cautioning us not to get in over our heads," she says. "You know, the big studios in those days always wanted their stars to go into debt so they would become dependent and not cause any trouble."

"Larry was with Columbia then, and Harry Cohn kept urging Larry to live higher. Cohn always wanted to lend Larry $50,000 to buy a bigger house, or to buy some fancier cars, or whatever. But Larry never did."

Larry Parks is mostly in the construction business these days. He still acts once in a while but he currently prefers his other career.

Betty has stuck with acting. Over the last 10 years or so, she's done mostly stage work. For roughly 2½ years, she toured in "Plaza Suite" with various actors, including Larry.

"That's too long to do one part," she says. "A year is enough."

But now she has a part that could last considerably longer than a year, or even 2½ years. She thinks she can take it.

Ask TV scout

A big question

I've got a dinner bet riding on the answer to this question. If I recall correctly the movie "Giant," starring Elizabeth Taylor, Rock Hudson and James Dean, was shown on NBC in two parts. My friend claims I'm suffering from hallucinations and it would give me great pleasure to re-establish my sanity with the backing of the press. — Cynthia Zelmonski, Chicago, Ill.

Consider your sanity restored and a dinner and drinks in your future. "Giant" was shown on NBC's movie program on Nov. 11 and 13, 1972.

Good flick

Several years ago I saw the movie "To Kill a Mockingbird" on TV and enjoyed it very much. Do they plan to show it again? — Marta Ash, Deland, Fla.

The lovely film, a classic starring Gregory Peck, is repeated locally quite often. Just keep checking your local listings.

How many millions?

How many times was The Six Million Dollar Man shown on TV before it became a series? My husband says just once and I say it was on twice. — Mrs. John Olson, Gordon, Wisc.

Well, on a technicality, you are both right. There was a pilot movie called "The Six Million Dollar Man" which introduced the "cyborg" character. It was popular and three episodes of the series were ordered, creating a mini-series which began this season. Two have been telecast on ABC. Meanwhile, the series is now becoming a regular weekly series.

Please identify

Is the man who played the male lead in Gift of Terror, an Afternoon Playbreak on ABC, the same man who played opposite Judy Carne in Love on a Rooftop? — Sallee Lapitz, Pengilly, Minn.

The ABC movie starred Michael Callen, Will Geer and Chris Connolly, who was the original Rodney Harrington in Peyton Place. The late Peter Deuel played Judy's husband in Love on a Rooftop.

M-A-S-Hnotes

Where can I write the people on M-A-S-H? — Pam Cohn, Skokie, Ill.

The series is filmed at the 20th Century-Fox studios, 10100 Pico Blvd., West Los Angeles, Calif. 90213. Write them there.

Likes the rains

Whatever happened to actor Claude Rains? Did he die? I see a lot of his old pictures on TV. — J.P., Chicago, Ill.

Yes, Rains died in 1967 at the age of 77. His daughter, Jessica, who appears on TV in guest parts, is married to Rick Lenz, who costars with Richard Boone in Hec Ramsey.

I like him

I like Monte Markham very much as the new Perry Mason and I hope the show runs a long time. I am sure he has been in a series before but I can't remember its name. Could you let me know so that I can prove to a friend that I am right? — Alice Williams, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Monte has been in two series, The Second Hundred Years and Mr. Deeds Goes to Town. Unfortunately for Monte's fans, the new Perry Mason series didn't make it with enough fans and has been cancelled.

Obituary column

Is actor John Boles living or dead. Also, is Lena Horne's husband, Lennie Hayton, dead? — Hazel Hydan, Austin, Tex.

Both gentlemen are dead.

Eager beaver

Can you tell me the names of the stars of the Leave It To Beaver series? — J.S., Chicago, Ill.

Beaver and his brother were played by Jerry Mathers and Tony Dow. Hugh Beaumont and Barbara Billingsley played their parents.

Dey Time

I think Susan Dey of The Partridge Family is one of the most attractive girls ever to appear on television. Where can I write her? — Jack February, Anchorage, Alaska.

The Partridge Family is filmed by Screen Gems. Write her c-o the studio, Burbank, Calif. 91505.

Dear John

What was the name of the program John Cassavetes did recently about a press agent in New York City? Thank you. — K.T., Orlando, Fla.

The show, a pilot, was called Night Side and was written for ABC by columnist Pete Hamill.

Ageless

Please settle this bet? My father says Dick Clark of American Bandstand is over 40 and I say he looks younger. — Don De Francesco, Chicago, Ill.

Dick was born in Mount

Vernon, N.Y. in 1929, which makes him 44. And you're right. He looks much younger than that.

Just the Facts, Maam

My sister says she read in a Houston paper these two items as facts: Mitzi Gaynor is the daughter of Janet Gaynor and Ryan O'Neil is the son of Patricia Neal. Would you check this for me? I can't believe either one. — Joyce Hack, San Antonio, Tex.

You are right not to believe them since neither item is true. Either your sister is teasing you, or she misread the paper, or someone was writing a spoof and she believed it.

Memories

Is The Waltons a rerun or a different version with different actors playing in it. Who played in the first Waltons? I know I saw it years ago. — E.F. Nelson, Muskegon, Mich.

You couldn't have seen The Waltons years ago, meaning a long, long time. But you could have seen The Homecoming: A Christmas Story, first telecast in 1971 and the movie-for-TV which led to the series. Patricia Neal, Andrew Duggan and Edgar Bergen played the roles now played by Michael Learned, Ralph Waite and Will Geer. Richard Thomas and the rest of the children from "Homecoming" are the same ones who appear in the weekly series.

Definitely

I say in the TV movie "The Over-the-Hill Gang Rides Again" that Fred Astaire played a drunk in trouble and my brother says "No way." Who is right? — G.P., Chicago, Ill.

You are.

Doug Deeper

Please tell me where Doug McClure lives and what TV shows he has played on. — K. Purdom, Little Rock, Ark.

Doug has been on series like Checkmate, The Virginian and Probe. Presently he is a free lance actor who works regularly in TV movies and as a guest on series. Most recently he was seen in the ABC-TV movie, Death Race. He lives in Los Angeles.

Correction

I would like to correct an answer to a question about who played opposite Patty Duke in "My Sweet Charlie." It was Al Freeman Jr. and not Lou Gossett. Al is now in the soap opera One Life to Live. — Bettye Ussery, Evansville, Ind.

You're right. Sorry about that. Lou Gossett did play the "My Sweet Charlie" role on Broadway with Bonnie Benelia playing the part Patty Duke played on TV.

Newhart's tv home

My girl friend and I have been arguing for ages about the building shown in the opening of The Bob Newhart Show. I say it's in Sandburg Village and she insists it is on Sheridan Road. Please clear this up. — N.M., Chicago, Ill.

Gladly, but you won't like the answer. Your girl friend is correct and the building is on Sheridan Road.

Like father, like mother

Please give me some information on actor Edward Albert who played in the movie "Forty Carats." G.S., Jacksonville, Ark.

Young Albert, in his early '20s, is the son of Eddie (Green Acres) Albert and his wife, actress Margo (who was in the original film version of "Lost Horizon"). Edward is also in "Butterflies Are Free." He's single and lives in Los Angeles.

Only one big wind

My mother and I have a bet. I say there was a movie version of "Gone With the Wind" made before the film that starred Clark Gable and Vivian Leigh. My mother says that one was the first and only one made. Who is right? — Diane McLean, Charlotte, S.C.

Mom is right. The Margaret Mitchell book, on which the movie is based, was a prize sought by most of the studios. There was also a tremendous talent hunt to find the actress to play Scarlett O'Hara. The late Vivian Leigh was a complete unknown in the U.S. when she was selected for the role which made her a major star. There is a musical version of GWTW now. It played in Los Angeles recently to bad reviews. Lesley Ann Warren (Mission: Impossible) played Scarlett and Pernell Roberts (Bonanza) was Rhett. They didn't make anyone forget the originals.

The passing of time

Could you please tell me what happened to those five young boys who sang on The Andy Williams Show several years ago? — Mrs. A.O.,

Corpus Christi, Tex.

They grew up. They were the Osmond Brothers and they still are. It's just that new little Osmonds keep coming along and joining the group. One of the boys once told me he thought the large Osmond family should join the very large King family and start their own city.

The music also lives

Can you please tell me who sang the theme song from "She Lives." — L. W., Chicago, Ill.

TV Scout has had several questions about the music used in the ABC Movie of the Week. The song is called "Time in a Bottle" and was sung by Jim Croce, who was recently killed in a plane crash. It's in his ABC-Dunhill album, "You Can't Mess Around With Jim."

Seven ages of man

Can you give me the ages of The Waltons in real life. — Janet Kincade, Melbourne, Ark.

Richard Thomas, who plays John-Boy, is 22. The others: Judy Norton (Mary Ellen Walton) was born Jan. 29, 1958; Jon Walmsley (Jason Walton) was born Feb. 2, 1956; Mary McDonough (Erin Walton) was born May 4, 1961; Eric Scott (Ben Walton) was born Oct. 20, 1958; David S. Harper (Jim-Bob Walton) was born Oct. 4, 1961, and Kami Cotler (Elizabeth Walton) was born June 17, 1965.

Music in the air

Please tell me what year "The Sound of Music" was first released. — Mrs. Marvin Taylor, Monroe, Ind.

The Julie Andrews starrer, the top grosser 20th Century Fox has had, was released on March 3, 1965, and was rereleased this past spring. It's a classic film, young as it is.

Cigars good for his health

What's the name of the man who does those Winchester cigar commercials? — M.M., Villa Park, Ill.

The handsome young man is named Michael Haines. Remember the name. You'll be seeing more of him.

Genesis of genesis

I would like to know if Gene Roddenberry's TV movie, Genesis II, on the CBS Friday Night Movies, will become a regular series. — Mrs. Mark Callis, Austin, Tex.

Nothing official has been announced but there is a very strong possibility that the series will go on CBS in January. Roddenberry is going ahead with scripts. The network ordered six in order to keep a hold on the show. Roddenberry has another pilot, Questor, which is a strong bet for a series berth, too. He's a busy man.

Yul tide

I would like to know what nationality Yul Brynner is, how old is he and what pictures has he been in. — Marsha Johnson, Chicago, Ill.

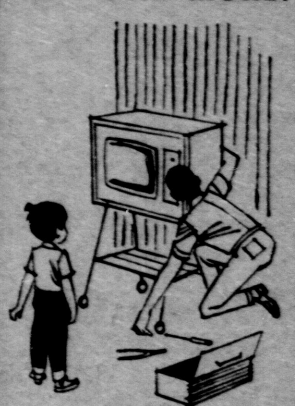

Brynner was born on Sakhalin Island, north of Japan, in 1920. He claims all kinds of exotic nationalities course through his veins. However, he had a sister, Vera, now dead, who was an opera singer. She spelled the name Bryner (pronounced Breyener) and was Russian. His most famous film, of course, was "Anna and the King of Siam," but he has also been in "The Ten Commandments," "Invitation to a Gunfight," "The Magnificent Seven" and so on.

Shore nuff

Was Dinah Shore married to High O'Brian? — J.R., Calumet City, Ind.

No, Dinah was married to another cowboy star, George Montgomery. Their daughter recently married.

Too busy to mow lawns

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Geoff Edwards is one of the world's top-seeded tennis-playing nuts. He'll pick up a racket at the drop of a racket. Only thing is, the way his schedule is these days, there's no time for playing.

He's the host on CBS' daytime game show, Treasure Hunt. He is part of an improvisational group and does an improvisational game show for Chuck Barris. He just finished a pilot for a new daytime across-the-board NBC show, Bank-O. And every morning he has a disc jockey show on one of Los Angeles' top radio stations.

"I always say," he always says, "that you have to keep busy or your wife will make you mow the lawn."

At the moment, there's no lawn mowing for Geoff Edwards and no tennis playing either. His super-busyness is part of a scheme to put him where he wants to be — host of his own talk show. He thinks he has the qualifications for such an assignment. Not only is he a good — maybe great — talker, but he has something no major talk show host has, a background in news.

Edwards comes from Westfield, N.J. He says that's a place where the kids grow up with the realization that as soon as they finish college they are supposed to buy a nice hat, tuck The New York Times under their arm and begin a lifetime of commuting to some fancy New York office.

Edwards tried that for three months, working for Western Electric. It wasn't for him. He always had wanted to be a drummer, so he went down to the musicians' union hiring hall and looked for work. But he saw all his drumming idols out of work, too, and realized that wasn't for him, either.

He went to radio school and learned how to be a broadcaster. His first job was in Albany, N.J., where he worked in an unheated transmitter. During the winter, it was so cold he wore gloves, a scarf and an overcoat. He lasted seven months, then wrote to every radio station in Florida and got a job in Palm Beach.

Palm Beach was good for him. He met his wife, Suzanne, there and he began to do bigger and better things on radio. He moved on, first to San Diego and then to Los Angeles.

For a while, he was out of the on-the-air business and was a broadcast executive. But he felt he preferred doing things himself, rather than telling others how to do it. He did news, interviews, everything. Now his morning DJ show is one of LA's most popular.

But it is the talk show he's aiming for.

"Doing these game shows," he says, "is by way of preparation. I think it's the only way to go about it these days. And I'm having fun, too."

Beginning a third career

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Some lucky people have one career in show business. A few have two careers. But beautiful little Bennye Gatteys is just beginning her third career.

Her first career was as a child, when she was a piano prodigy. Then, while still a child she switched to acting and did well. She succeeded Susan Strasberg on Broadway in the leading role in "The Diary of Anne Frank" and then did many heavy things on Broadway and on live TV.

She gave it all up to get married. Her husband was a Texas banker and she lived in Dallas for seven years. Her only acting were some local stage appearances there, but mostly she was just your average beautiful Texas housewife.

When the marriage broke up, she was faced with several decisions. First was a geographical one. She had originally been a Texan and all her family and friends were there so she was tempted to stay. But she also liked California.

And there was a career decision to make, too. She wanted to be busy, and considered a return to acting plus concentrating on another love, interior decorating. But acting won out and so did California.

She came back to Los Angeles a couple of years ago and decided she'd been away from acting for so long that she would have to re-learn her craft. She says she knew she was very rusty so she studied for two years. Then she went on interviews for parts.

She got a small part on her first, the second and third were fruitless, but the fourth landed her a steady, starring role on the NBC soap opera, Days Of Our Lives. She succeeded Denise Alexander in April, as Susan Martin.

She says that starting her third career was harder than starting before.

"The problem was," she says, "that all the casting directors knew me — but they knew me as a child actress. They would hear my name and automatically they would say, 'Oh, yes, Bennye Gatteys. She's great, but she's too young for this part.'"

Bennye Gatteys

It was hard for her, moving onto an established show (Days Of Our Lives just celebrated its eighth birthday) and taking over a part played for so long by one of the show's favorites. But, she says, there have been very few negative comments from the show's fans.

Generally, soap operas write out characters when actors leave a show but in this case they simply replaced Miss Alexander. One day Susan Martin was played by Denise, the next day by Bennye. And there is no resemblance between the two, except that they are both slight in build.

Bennye's name

incidentally, is her own. She says her father wanted a boy. The E at the end of the name was a concession made to her femininity.

SWEET SOUNDS AROUND WORLD

WHIPPANY, N.J. (AP) — In 1972, overseas sales of U.S.-made coin-operated phonograph machines — formerly called juke boxes — were up 17 per cent over 1971, from $18,600,000 to $21,800,000.

This year, according to Earl C. Ramsey, president of Rowe International Inc., a manufacturer of the machines, sales are expected to hit $25 million for a gain of 14 per cent over 1972.

Through a Lenz - brightly

By JOAN CROSBY

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — The world of medicine lost a doctor when Rick Lenz fainted while watching his father, a doctor, perform a minor bit of surgery.

"He told me it was natural the first time you watch surgery. But I knew I would also faint the second time and the third time."

Rick was studying pre-medicine in college "and I was not liking it and not doing well." And that's when he discovered the stage.

"I previously had some experience, but this time it obsessed me. I also discovered it was more fun than anything else I could think of."

And that's how come he is now co-starring in Hec Ramsey, part of the NBC Sunday Mystery Movie series.

Tall, dark, intelligent and shy, Rick says, "I feel sorry for people who haven't acted. If you have, you can have the feeling of being a superhuman, of extending past yourself. No, superhuman is a wrong work — but it's a crossing-over into another place which you achieve when you consolidate your powers of concentration beyond anything you have imagined possible."

Rick comes to California from Broadway, where he played in "Cactus Flower," a role he repeated in the movie version. He moved here permanently only two years ago, although for the past five he had been a coast-to-coast commuter.

"Now my wife and I have bought a house and a 30-year mortgage gives one a permanent feeling."

He is married to Jessica Rains, the daughter of the late Claude Rains. They met doing a play together, of course.

When he is not acting, Rick is very busy with his playwriting. One of his plays, a two-character comedy-drama called "The Epic of Buster Friend," was produced in New York as part of the ANTA Matinee series. It was well received.

Rick doesn't like the solitary aspect of writing (what writer does?) and says he writes "with a friend who has some genius in him."

"I prefer acting," he says. "I only like writing if I can write with someone. Acting can take a lot of research and thought but it's much more social activity than writing."

Likes career, but still bored

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Roger Perry is one of perhaps 50 fine actors who form Hollywood television's backbone. These are the actors who do the secondary guest star roles, without which there would be no TV series. Perry is one of the busiest and best.

He says this has been a crazy season for him. For some reason he's been doing mostly smaller parts but making more money than ever before. He doesn't pretend to understand it. Except for one thing, he likes it.

The one thing is boredom. This is curious because it was boredom that made him become an actor.

He grew up in Iowa and Colorado, where his father had a shoe store. During his junior and senior high school years he found that the only thing that didn't bore him was acting in the school plays. So he majored in dramatics when he went to Grinnell College. On the side he made some extra money playing piano in little clubs.

So he became an actor, because acting didn't bore him. But lately boredom has been striking again.

"Now I find acting bores me a lot," he says. "It's funny. You can't wait until you get a part and, when you get it, you can't wait until it's over and done. Even while you're working you keep checking with the A.D. (assistant director) to see if you can have an hour off to go home for a while."

That's why he wants to move on to production. About two years ago, he formed his own company. They have acquired a script and, when they can get some money together, they plan to shoot the movie.

The script was written by a friend of Ted Knight who plays Ted Baxter on The Mary Tyler Moore Show. And Ted would star in it, in a role that would be a departure for him from the usual things he does.

"Producing your own films is where it's at today," Perry says.

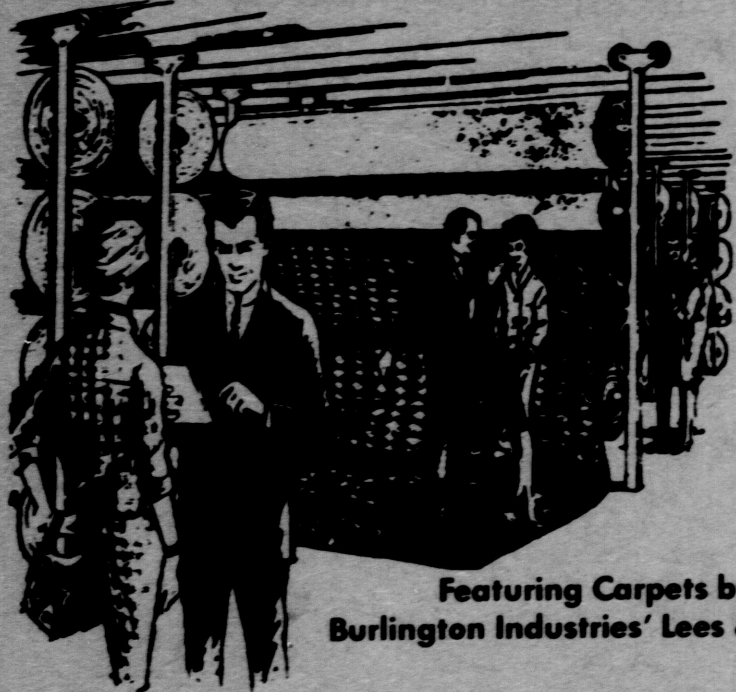

He says in all the time he's been acting, he hasn't really had a great part, which may account for at least part of his boredom. Over the years, he's done many series over and over — he's been on The F.B.I. five or six times.

"Did you know that nobody is ever killed on The F.B.I.?" he says. "I've been shot four times but I'm always carted away in an ambulance."

Perry and JoAnne Worley are, as he puts it, "roommates." They have been together for some seven years now. Their relationship is so permanent, despite the lack of a marriage license, that they even own a home jointly. He says he is against marriage although he admits she isn't.

He was married once but is now divorced. His ex-wife and their two children now live in Minnesota.

Song means success in TV

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — All it takes is a hit record and a pretty face and, presto, you're in demand for TV.

That's the way it is now for Maureen McGovern, who has those two prerequisites. It was Maureen, almost single-voiced, who got an Oscar for the song "The Morning After" from "The Poseidon Adventure." Nobody had paid much attention to the song when the picture came out but then she recorded it and the record caught fire and won an Oscar.

Now everybody wants her. She's beginning to make the TV rounds — guesting on the syndicated variety shows, the late night network variety shows, the talk shows. She has that hit record, plus a follow-up hit.

Maureen has been a professional only for a year and a half, although, at 27, she's no raw rookie. She's from Youngstown, Ohio, where her father is a packaging engineer. She grew up singing but decided it would be sensible to have a trade to fall back on.

So she became a secretary and worked for four years for a variety of employers, including a trucking firm and a group of anesthesiologists.

She began her professional career singing around Ohio and, at one such engagement, there was a barber in the audience. He happened to mention the pretty blonde with the lovely voice to one of his patrons, an agent, and the agent went to hear her and that's how Maureen got her agent.

She has no home now. She's constantly on the road, working clubs, colleges, wherever. If she has any time off she goes back home to Youngstown. Wherever she goes, she takes her world with her. It packs into five suitcases — her clothes, her guitar, her adding machine, her typewriter, everything.

"My clothes are gradually getting ruined by the valet services in hotels," she says. "One dress came back so ruined that I had to cut it down to a blouse."

She has no desire to do anything but sing, no burning urge to become an actress or do a stage musical. She says she might do a film musical if a good one came along, and with her coloring — pale blonde hair and blue eyes — she'd be a delight on the screen.

She just recorded the title song from "Cinderella Liberty."

Energy crunch being felt in St. Louis area

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Thousands of workers have been laid off for varying periods in recent weeks as the energy crunch began to tighten the thumb screws on the St. Louis area economy.

Some major businesses have already announced cutbacks in production and others are considering similar moves as crude oil and fuel and products depending on the availability of both become harder to obtain.

Yet, even in view of such dire economic indicators, officials have avoided statements about the over-all economic impact of the energy crisis or predictions on how their firms will be affected in the coming months.

"The total impact is an unknown," said a researcher for the St. Louis Regional Commerce and Growth Association. "The people we have talked to about their day-to-day operations have questions too. Some think the Arab oil embargo will end soon and they are basing their outlook on that. Everything is on such a weak basis that every company has a different opinion and a different situation."

According to the RCGA, however, the energy crisis is making itself felt in the business community in three ways: A shortage of fuel to carry on actual production operations, a shortage of crude oil-based components necessary for production and a decline in demand for products that depend on fuel for consumer operation.

The auto industry and businesses dependent on the car, suffering from acute reduction in consumer demand, appear to be one of the hardest hit in the St. Louis area in terms of employment and production drops.

The passenger car assembly line at General Motors' Chevrolet plant in St. Louis will suspend operations for 10 days this month and then resume minus the second shift. Chevrolet's Fred Howell said the decision on whether that shift and its 2,200 jobs will be reinstated depends on future demand.

The Chrysler Corp. laid off 5,000 employees at its south St. Louis County plant last week for three days, and Ford temporarily furloughed 1,700 workers at its Mercury assembly line in Hazelwood last month.

The Ford Mercury plant's 2,700 hourly workers will be laid off for two weeks this month, the first week starting Monday. Robert Harnar, a Ford Co. spokesman, said the afternoon shift at the Mercury plant will be eliminated indefinitely starting Feb. 4. That action will leave about 1,300 hourly workers and 135 supervisors off the job.

More than 900 persons have been affected by the closing of the A. O. Smith Corp. plant in Granite City, Ill., but officials say they plan to reopen the plant, which makes frames for GM, on Jan. 21.

"But the situation is in such flux, we can't really say what's going to happen," explained Howell. "We just don't know what the market demand for the big cars like we make here will be."

The Missouri Division of Employment Security reported a drop of nearly 20,000 jobs in the metropolitan area from mid-October to mid-November, and although most of that decline was attributed to a reduction in seasonal employment, Emmet Connors said some of the lost jobs were in the transportation industry, such as over-the-road trucking and the airlines.

"But it's rather difficult to determine the impact of the energy crisis numerically," Connors said. "With many layoffs, there is no single cause. And in some cases they may be directly related to a shortage of fuel, but in others it may be because of a component shortage."

Service stations, caught between thin profit margins and reduced gasoline allocations, have suffered an employment drop of 18 per cent since last January, Connors said.

Dealer representatives have estimated that about 1,000 employees and operators are currently without jobs because of the fuel shortage and more than 200 stations in the metropolitan area have closed.

Walter Wiegand, director of the Mid-America Gas Marketers Association, has predicted more unemployment will occur in the service station industry as the energy crisis worsens.

That appeared imminent from the comments of Bob McDaniel at the Standard Oil Co., of Ohio refinery in nearby Wood River, Ill.

"Right now, we are running the refinery at a fairly good clip, but we anticipate a cutback in production by 15 per cent by mid-January," McDaniel said, adding, however, that no layoffs are expected. "We just can't get enough crude oil."

The Shell Oil refinery in Wood River was running at normal pace last month and there have been no layoffs, according to spokesman Gil Barrett. But Barrett declined to comment on prospects for the coming months.

"It all depends on the availability of crude oil," he said. "I don't think layoffs are a subject for discussion right now. Everything is too speculative."

Officials at several of the major employers in the St. Louis area say their firms have yet to experience any drastic effects of the energy crisis although energy-saving programs have been instituted nearly everywhere.

"It's difficult to get a reading yet because the thing is still so much in flux," explained Larry Maher of Olin Chemical Corp. "Our main thing is conservation of everything, both at home and in the plant."

Harry Wilson, a spokesman for Granite City Steel, echoed the outlook of most firms when he said, "It looks like we'll have enough fuel to get through the winter, but you can't get any firm word from anybody, and I guess this goes all the way up to Mr. (William E.) Simon (President Nixon's chief energy advisor)."

Connors of the state Employment Security Division said everyone appears to be taking a wait-and-see attitude.

"Those we have discussed the matter with talk with their fingers crossed and say they are hoping against hope that the situation won't deteriorate to a further degree," he commented.

Adams new president of Sedalia Bank and Trust

E. G. Adams

E. G. Adams, West Walnut Hills, was elected president of Sedalia Bank & Trust Co. at the January meeting of the board of directors held this week, immediately following the annual stockholders meeting of the bank.

Adams, whose home was in Hopkinsville, Ky., prior to his becoming associated with the local bank last April, is a former Kentucky commissioner of banking. He was elected to the bank board in June and named an operations officer at that time. He succeeds John J. Knies, who was named vice chairman of the board.

Other officers elected were Jason V. Ott, board chairman; L. R. Hughes Jr., executive vice president and trust officer; Larry Callis and Don F. Broadus, vice presidents; Mrs. Juanita Hood, cashier; Dale Wasson, assistant vice president and security officer; Mrs. Betty Longwith, assistant secretary, and Gary Logan, comptroller, auditor, secretary and assistant trust officer.

Newly-elected to the board of directors were H. W. Swearingen, vice president of Lamy Manufacturing Co.; James L. Lanning, chairman of the board and president of the Blue Ridge Bank of Kansas City; and H. A. Joy, owner and president of Sedalia Implement Co. They will replace Frank Mehl, long-time officer of the bank who is now president of the Jefferson County Bank, Hillsboro, Mo., and W. G. Whitaker, Sedalia, who resigned because of poor health.

Swearingen is a graduate of the University of Missouri with a B.S. degree in business administration and finance and is presently a director of the First National Bank of Nevada, Mo. He was an active officer of that bank from 1960 to 1973 before coming to Sedalia to become associated with Lamy's. He is married to the former Virginia Stafford and they have two children.

Lanning is a graduate of Baker University, Baldwin, Kan., and completed the graduate school of banking at Madison, Wis., in 1962. He had business and banking experience before becoming the head of the Blue Ridge Bank. He is a vice president of Mercantile Trust Co. of St. Louis. He and his wife and two children live in Shawnee-Mission, Kan.

Joy attended the University of Missouri, joining Sedalia Implement in 1955. He is a former president of the Walnut Hills Country Club and is currently a director. He and his wife, the former Juanita Means, are the parents of three children. His two sons are associated with him in the implement business.

CAB ruling says TWA can drop Nashville

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has ruled that Trans World Airlines could drop its service to Nashville, Tenn.

It also announced that Continental could halt its flights between Tulsa, Okla., and Kansas City. The carrier will retain flights from other cities into Tulsa and Kansas City, however.

Still pending before the board is a Frontier Airlines request to end its flights to Stillwater and Bartlesville, Okla.

White House counselor resigning

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Fred J. Fielding, former chief assistant to John W. Dean III, is resigning as deputy White House counsel and returning to the private practice of law.

Sources at the Western White House confirmed 34-year-old Fielding's imminent departure but denied a report that Bruce Kehrli, a protégé of H. R. Haldeman, also planned to resign soon. Kehrli, staff secretary, made an unannounced flight here recently to join the presidential party.

Both Fielding and Kehrli testified at the trial of the Watergate burglars and both were witnesses to the opening of the White House safe of E. Howard Hunt two days after the 1972 break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters. Kehrli also was the second witness before the Senate Watergate Committee last May.

There has been no suggestion that either man was connected with any wrongdoing. Dean, fired as White House counsel last April 30, testified Fielding acted as an innocent messenger in carrying $350,000 in cash from the Committee for the Re-election of the President to Haldeman, who ostensibly kept it for a time to finance "polling" activities.

A source close to Fielding said the deputy counsel, who joined the White House staff from a Philadelphia law firm in 1970, had wanted to return to private practice for some time but delayed resigning lest anyone conclude it was related to the Watergate scandal.

then travels through heaters in his house. He keeps the indoor temperature at 65 degrees and says he uses about a fourth of a cord of wood per day, depending on the weather. He is getting the device patented. (UPI)

White House said willing to negotiate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford says the White House may be willing to release some of the 500 tapes and documents demanded by the Senate Watergate Committee.

In an interview, he said he received support for his proposal for compromise efforts in a telephone conversation with White House Chief of Staff Alexander M. Haig Jr.

"They're willing to sit down and negotiate, as I understand it," Ford said. He said the White House has given its support to the compromise proposal he made last weekend.

Committee Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., has said he is willing to compromise on the subpoenaed tapes and documents.

Ford said he thinks the White House is willing to "release tapes and other material on a selected basis where the information falls within the jurisdiction of that committee."

On other subjects in the 40-minute interview, Ford said: "He called for early action on measures to curb windfall profits by energy-related industries, set up an energy research program and establish a permanent energy agency."

"He believes there are some pluses that the President will achieve, including a Middle East breakthrough, that will make him by September a very helpful campaigner" for Republicans.

"He has made no change in his announced intention not to be a 1976 presidential candidate but, when asked about the impact of continued high ratings in polls, said "We'll analyze the situation as we go along."

"He plans to follow President Nixon's example and take a commercial flight on a speaking trip to Columbus, Ohio, and Florida later this month."

"His role in supervising Nixon administration domestic activities may be defined more clearly after a meeting next week with outgoing White House aide Melvin R. Laird and top officials on the President's Domestic Council."

Ford's statement of White House willingness to negotiate with the Senate Watergate Committee on release of some of the tapes and documents it subpoenaed last month went beyond statements from presidential aides with Nixon in California.

After Ford suggested Sunday that a compromise was possible if there was "some refinement" of the committee's demand, White House aides first indicated the vice president was speaking for himself.

Later, however, deputy press Secretary Gerald L. Warren indicated that compromise was possible if the committee scaled down its demands, though some presidential aides have continued to take a hard line against any possibility of compromise.

Psychiatry phase out at St. Louis

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The University of Missouri plans to expand psychiatric research and training at its Columbia and Kansas City campuses and to phase it out at the St. Louis campus.

The plans were announced Thursday in a joint statement by Brice Hatchford, University of Missouri president, and Dr. Harold Robb, state mental health division director.

"A major reason for this shift is that, in recent years, effective working relationships have developed between the division's Mid-Missouri Mental Health Center and the UMC School of Medicine, and between the division's Western Missouri Mental Health Center and UMKC's School of Medicine," the statement said.

"It seems more efficient and appropriate for expansion of the future relationships to occur in these locations, where there are established medical schools and faculty expertise, not only in medicine but also in other medical and behavioral sciences."

The rush vs. the scramble

Super Bowl VIII fate hinges on Larry Csonka, Tarkenton

HOUSTON (AP) — It all seems to come down to Larry Csonka vs. Fran Tarkenton — brutal, relentless strength vs. deadly, explosive agility.

Csonka typifies the Miami Dolphins, the one-touchdown favorites in Sunday's Super Bowl VIII against Tarkenton's Minnesota Vikings.

The Dolphins are a business-like team, methodically wearing down the opposition, finding a play and sticking with it until somebody comes up with a way to stop it.

Nobody found a way to really stop Csonka in 1973. Bulling straight into the line or slanting off the tackles, he punched out 1,003 yards on 219 carries.

When the enemy decided to concentrate on Csonka, Mercury Morris went to work. With his waterbug speed and moves, he weaved his way for 954 yards on 149 runs. He most likely would have reached 1,000 yards, except for an injury that kept him out of the final regular-season game.

And to add to the running strength, the Dolphins again had Jim Kiick. He used to be known as half of the "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" team with Csonka before Morris "arrived." He's been fading into the background since then — but he can't be overlooked.

In 1971, when Csonka gained 1,051 yards, Kiick had 738 and Morris only 315. In 1972 Csonka had 1,117 yards, Morris flashed onto the scene with exactly 1,000 and Kiick, shunted aside a bit, had 521.

This season, though, Kiick became more of a specialist — coming in when the Dolphins faced a third-down and long situation or when they were within a few yards of a touchdown.

Kiick was used not only as a runner — he finished with 257 yards — but also was a fine blocker and a dangerous short-yardage receiver. As the team's No. 3 receiver behind Marlin Briscoe and Paul Warfield, Kiick caught 27 passes for 208 yards.

"Those three backs," said Minnesota linebacker Jeff Sie-mon, "give the Dolphins everything they need — everything anybody could need — in an offensive backfield attack."

It's not that the Dolphins can't pass. It's that they don't have to — but they can put the ball in the air with the best of teams. Bob Griese, a cool, precise, almost mechanical quarterback, threw the ball 218 times this season, completing 116 of the passes for 1,422 yards and 17 touchdowns while having only eight passes intercepted.

When Griese goes to the bomb, his usual target is Warfield, the 10-year veteran from Ohio State.

Whether Warfield will be gliding around Rice Stadium Sunday, though, is uncertain, because of a pulled hamstring tendon in his right leg. He suffered the injury during a workout and spent Thursday strolling around the practice field sidelines in a sweatshirt.

Coach Don Shula was concerned. "We can't afford to lose a player of that magnitude," he said. And Warfield was a bit down, too. "It certainly dampens a guy's spirits before the big game."

If Warfield is unable to play, Howard Twilley, who usually plays behind Briscoe, would start. Twilley caught only two passes all season.

Coincidentally, Griese was rated the No. 2 passer in the American Conference behind Ken Stabler of the Oakland Raiders, whom the Dolphins beat for the AFC title — while Tarkenton, No. 2 in the National Conference behind Roger Staubach of the Dallas Cowboys, whom the Vikings beat for the NFC title.

Tarkenton was more of a thrower than Griese, connecting on 169 of 274 passes — 61.7 per cent — for 2,113 yards and 15 touchdowns with seven interceptions.

But it's his nickname that makes him so dangerous. He's the scrambler, throwing opposition pass-rushers and defensive secondaries into a panic by darting around behind the line of scrimmage, then either unloading a timely pass at the last instant or breaking loose for a big gain and leaving a trail of weary would-be tacklers in his wake.

While Griese ran for only 20 yards all season — he had seven more than that in just one scramble against Oakland — Tarkenton ran for 202 yards.

Running is not his forte, though. He leaves that to the experts. In Minnesota's case, it's a rookie, Chuck Foreman from the University of Miami. He gained 801 yards despite missing a lot of action in mid-season with an injury.

While the Dolphins concentrated their running in the Csonka-Morris tandem that accounted for 1,957 of the team's 2,521 yards, the Vikings spread their yardage around. Behind Foreman came Oscar Reed with 401 yards, followed by Ed Marinaro with 302, Dave Osborn with 216, Bill Brown with 206 and Tarkenton with 202.

"They're just a fine, solid football team in all departments," Shula said of the Vikings. And, turning to Tarkenton, he added: "He can kill you. He can break a game wide open. He can turn a busted play into a big gainer."

With Morris' darting runs and Fran's scrambling, this could be one of the most wide-open championships in the past few years.

"The last few Super Bowl games have been conservative, close-to-the-vest affairs," says Bud Grant, the Vikings' coach. What he means, as far as most football fans are concerned, is that this contest of titans has become boring, a grind-it-out, take-no-chances meeting.

Unknowns hold lead at Phoenix

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Artie McNickle had a surprise share of the top spot in the $150,000 Phoenix Open, but he held no real illusions about winning the title.

"I just hope I do a little better than I did the last time I was in this spot," the obscure, curly-haired sophomore on the pro golf tour said Thursday after his erratic, four-under-par 67 had given him a tie for the first-round lead with rookie Mark Hayes.

The last time — and only previous occasion — the 26-year-old McNickle had been in this position was in the Southern Open last season.

"I had led for the first round — then just barely made the cut," McNickle recalled. He had an opening 67 there, blew to a 76 in the second round and finished 66th in a 69-man field.

He and Hayes, a shy, soft-spoken youngster from Oklahoma City who is playing in only his fourth tour event, had a one-stroke edge over a closely bunched field that included eight of last year's top nine money-winners.

Tied with 66s were veteran Texans Miller Barber and Fred Marti, along with Paul Purtzer, Bob Wynn and Larry Wood.

U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller, winner of last week's weather-shortened Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, was in solid contention at 69.

Billy Casper and Masters champion Tommy Aaron were at 70, and defending Phoenix Open titlist Bruce Crampton of Australia matched par 71 on the 6,709-yard Phoenix Country Club layout. Tom Weiskopf had a 72.

Lee Trevino, making his first start of the year, didn't have a birdie in firing a four-over-par 75. Trevino must improve if he is to survive the cut to the low 70 scorers after today's round.

Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer are not competing.

Finley demanded compensation and when the two clubs couldn't agree, former American League president Joe Cronin stepped in and quashed Williams' transfer plans.

"He's (Finley) a businessman," explained Williams. "We still speak on friendly terms. I don't believe in ripping anybody."

Williams admitted he was going to miss baseball but also talked happily about having time to spend with his wife, Norma, and their three children.

"I'll be able to see my son, Rick, graduate from high school this summer," said Williams. "I am very excited and happy. I will be traveling on occasion, but it sure beats packing and repacking."

MacArthur, 76, said Williams' duties would be "to do whatever I don't have time to do. There's a great many places he'll be helpful. I'm getting older every day."

Asked whether he'd retain Williams just for winter months if Williams got a chance to manage again, MacArthur said, "it's subject to negotiation."

Williams doesn't plan to completely ignore baseball this year. He said he already told the management of Palm Beach's Class A Florida State League team that he was available to throw out the first ball of the season.

A pair of 42's

If aerial warfare is a big factor in Super Bowl VIII Sunday, two of the prime targets for the big bombs will probably be Paul Warfield (left) of Miami and Minnesota's John Gilliam. Warfield suffered a pulled hamstring in Wednesday's practice and may be hampered by the injury. (UPI)

Miami's long-bomb threat

Paul Warfield status in doubt until Sunday

HOUSTON (AP) — Paul Warfield, Miami's premier receiver, is a touchdown bomb waiting to explode, but he may have been defused for the Super Bowl game by a hamstring injury.

Warfield pulled the tendon coming off the line during a workout Wednesday, leaving his status clouded for Sunday's Super Bowl against the Minnesota Vikings.

Miami Coach Don Shula said he might wait until pre-game warmups to decide if Warfield would play. Dolphins' trainer Larry Gardner said, however, that he thought Warfield would be ready.

"We're being very conservative about this," Gardner said.

"I expect to be ready," Warfield said. "Something like this dampens your spirit somewhat. I can only tell Coach Shula how I feel and then the decision is his."

If he plays, Warfield, who caught 29 passes, including 11 for touchdowns, during the regular National Football League season, will get plenty of attention from the Vikings.

Warfield said Thursday he's had to adjust to the fact that zone defenses are forcing professional football into conservatism.

"With today's zone defenses, there are so many men downfield waiting, that a quarterback has to be super to complete a pass," said Warfield. "On Sunday, the percentages are not with me or any other receiver."

Warfield caught a career high 50 passes at Cleveland in 1968, but his totals at Miami the past two seasons have been 29 catches each year. Lining up is instant frustration, Warfield says.

"First, the cornerback is there to jam me and I have to go around him," he said. "Then maybe a linebacker will pick me up and there's a safety behind him just waiting for me to come into his zone."

Warfield said rotating zone defenses, which he'll be seeing against the Vikings, take away the individual challenge of one-on-one.

"When I was in high school our coach told us if each of us beat our man we would win," Warfield said. "Now you have to beat three."

North rates slim edge over South in Sr. Bowl

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A trio of All-American backs, David Jaynes of Kansas, Heisman Trophy winner John Cappelletti of Penn State and fleet flanker Lynn Swann of Southern California, give the North All-Stars a slight edge over the South in Saturday's 25th Senior Bowl football game.

The nationally televised (NBC) professional debut for some of the nation's most promising collegiate seniors is set for a 1 p.m. EDT, kickoff in Ladd Stadium. A sellout crowd of 40,646 is expected.

Television viewers will see a few new wrinkles in this allstar clash since the kickoff will be made from the 35, rather than the 40-yard line. All kickoffs must be returned except those going out of the end zone.

"This brings back the most exciting play in football — the kickoff return," said Rea Schuessler, general manager of the game.

College rules, in general, will prevail, although fumbles may be advanced and a runner falling may return to his feet and continue to advance the ball. The two-point conversion will not be used and a team behind by nine or more points will have an option to receive a kickoff.

Jaynes, holder of six league records in the rugged Big Eight Conference, passed for 2,131 yards and 83 touchdowns in his senior season at Kansas. He edged out Mike Boryla of Stanford for the quarterback spot on the team coached by Mike McCormack of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Cappelletti rushed for more than 1,500 yards in his senior season but was held to only 50 yards in Penn State's Orange Bowl victory over Louisiana State. Swann pulled in 37 passes for 667 yards and six touchdowns for USC.

The South, coached by Don McCafferty of the Detroit Lions, counters with a pair of Arizona State aces and an Alabama star in its backfield.

The quarterback is Danny White, a second unit All-American who led ASU to 29 victories in 32 games during his career. He passed for 2,609 yards and 23 touchdowns last season and accounted for 73 scores in three seasons.

Woody Green, another Arizona State star, rushed for more than 1,000 yards in each of his three varsity seasons while Alabama's Wilbur Jackson had a healthy 7.9-yard per carry average.

Defensive standouts in the game include four with All-American credentials for the North, although one, middle guard Lucious Selmon of Oklahoma, is a doubtful performer because of a pulled hamstring.

The others are down linemen John Dutton of Nebraska and Bill Kollar of Montana State, a Little All-American, and safety Artimus Parker of Southern Cal.

The South has first team All-Americans in Andre Tillman, a tight end from Texas Tech center Billy Wyman of Texas and offensive guard Buddy Brown of Alabama.

Van Brocklin theory won't hold

Miami rush too much for Vikes

By BEN THOMAS
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — As Super Bowl Sunday draws nearer and the Fearless Football Forecaster is called upon for the final time this season to make his peerless prognostication, one recalls the words of Norm Van Brocklin.

The Dutchman, first head coach of the Minnesota Vikings, once said about Francis Asbury Tarkenton:

"He will win games he should lose. And he'll lose games he should win. But he'll never win games he should win."

If Van Brocklin's assessment is correct, then Tarkenton and the Minnesota Vikings should emerge victorious over the Miami Dolphins on Sunday in Super Bowl VIII ... because this is a game that everybody says the Vikings will lose.

That is everybody but Bud Grant and the Vikings.

"I don't feel I'm a loser," says Tarkenton, but he keeps telling everyone that no matter what he does against the Dolphins, nothing will change Monday.

Before disclosing whether the Fearless Forecaster will go along with the multitude, or the minority, let's report that this corner called both the American Conference and National Conference championship games correctly. That lifted the seasonal showing to 133 correct, 48 incorrect, plus 7 ties for 735 percentage.

Disregarding Van Brocklin's commentary on Tarkenton, there are a couple of other reasons why Minnesota could be picked as the winner, such as sentiment for the underdog, and the theory that on any Sunday any team can beat any other.

But sentiment rarely wins ball games and the other theory holds equally true for the Dolphins.

Miami just has too much going for it. The Dolphins are probably as perfect a football team as can be found. They just don't make mistakes, when it counts.

As Grant said: "You look at most of their games and they look undefensible, unstoppable."

You can expect the Dolphins to run, run, run ... and then run some more. And with Larry Csonka and Mercury Morris and Jim Kiick — and even Bob Griese, the Dolphins will grind out the yardage, gobble up time, put everybody to sleep and it will wind up ... DOLPHINS 20, VIKINGS 10.

Finley stopgap

Dick Williams answers questions at a press conference where he signed a contract to work as administrative assistant to financier John D. MacArthur (left) Williams will sit out the baseball season in his newly created position rather than return as the Oakland A's manager under Charles O. Finley. (UPI)

Short-term measure?

Williams out of baseball

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — With the stroke of a pen, self-exiled Oakland A's Manager Dick Williams has switched from baseball's major leagues to the leagues of business.

Williams inked an agreement Thursday to be administrative assistant to Florida billionaire John D. MacArthur.

MacArthur said he hoped the pact would be permanent but Williams talked more like it was a stop-gap measure.

He's waiting either for his attorneys to overturn a court injunction preventing him from managing another major league team or for expiration of the final two years of a contract to boss the Athletics.

Although terms weren't announced, Williams apparently eliminated any financial need to give in to Oakland owner Charles O. Finley and return to the Athletics, winners of the last two World Series under Williams.

MacArthur conceded that Williams' services were "expensive" and Williams, smiling, said, "I appreciate the kindness of my neighbor, Mr. MacArthur."

Williams is a resident of Riviera Beach, near the Collonades Hotel which MacArthur owns and uses as headquarters for his financial empire.

Williams refused to criticize the stand Finley made that cost him the managing job of the New York Yankees this summer.

Mercer pulls big upset

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Manhattan's shooting stars were blocked out by streaking southern comets Thursday night.

And Mercer College doesn't expect to come down to earth after an upset, 81-71 basketball victory.

"The word is getting around that we have a pretty good ball club," said Mercer Coach Joe Dan Gold after beating Manhattan's skyscrapers. "We don't worry about lack of recognition."

The unheralded team from Macon, Ga., outshone an Eastern power that has admirable credentials this year — including the championship of the Holiday Festival Tournament at Madison Square Garden.

"It has to be my biggest victory at Mercer," said Gold, whose little-known squad has won 10 of 12 games this season. "Manhattan obviously is a fine team, winning the Holiday Festival and beating Temple recently."

Memphis State, the nation's No. 19 team, and No. 20 Hawaii were also upset Thursday night. Drake ripped Memphis State 91-80 and Missouri turned back previously unbeaten Hawaii 86-74.

Long Beach State, No. 9, played more to form by beating the University of Pacific 72-53.

Tigers thump Hawaii

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Missouri Tigers got in the last lick of preparations for the Big Eight basketball season and raised the league's prestige by beating Hawaii 86-74 Thursday night.

The 20th-ranked Hawaii Rainbows had been unbeaten, but now are 11-1 after their first game outside the islands this season. Missouri is 9-3.

After a slim 40-39 halftime lead, the Tigers rode the hot shooting of Gary Link to a comfortable 80-65 margin with 3:44 to go. Link pitched in 18 of his 24 points during the second half. He hit 11 of 15 field shots.

Al Eberhardt counted 18 points and 10 rebounds. Gail Wolf got 14 points and Kevin King 12 for the Tigers.

All Big Eight teams start league action Saturday. Iowa State will be at Missouri, Nebraska at Kansas, Kansas State at Oklahoma and Colorado plays an afternoon game at Oklahoma State.

Kansas State won an easy warm-up game with Northeast Missouri Wednesday night, but otherwise, the Big Eight clubs have been resting up for the tip-off in the title chase.

Coach Norm Stewart of Missouri was encouraged by the return of Steve Dangos, who had missed three games with a bad knee. Dangos got eight points and Stewart said he might start against Iowa State.

The game was played without the 30-second clock and Stewart thought his club worked the ball in more quickly. "I don't know what it is, but our club plays faster without the clock," Stewart said.

Mercer's dramatic victory was fashioned behind Leonard Hardin and Billy Smith. Hardin scored 25 points and combined with Smith for 27 of Mercer's 50 rebounds.

The winners held every Jasper in check except Bill Campion, a 6-foot-10 brute who went wild with 28 points and 15 rebounds. But even Campion was nullified in the late going, when Mercer moved away from a 42-42 tie.

The Jaspers, described by some basketball "experts" as the kings of New York City, lost their third game in 10 starts this season.

Larry Haralson scored 30 points in Drake's stunner over Memphis State. The Bulldogs used 17 of Haralson's points to build a 21-point lead in the first half and the Tigers never got closer than six thereafter.

Dexter Reed scored 22 points for the Tigers, who lost their fourth game in 15.

Leonard Gray hit on 13 of 14 field goal attempts, scoring 27 points, to lead Long Beach over Pacific. The 49ers romped despite the absence of starters Glen McDonald and Roscoe Pondexter, who had earlier been declared ineligible because of poor grades. The 49ers shot a sizzling 65 per cent from the floor.

Elsewhere in college basketball, Florida State trimmed Virginia Tech 85-80; Connecticut downed Syracuse 61-60; Houston tripped Baylor 74-70; Boston College nudged Villanova 81-79; Idaho State took a 71-67 overtime decision over Weber State; Denver defeated Wyoming 76-70; Boise State topped Northern Arizona 73-65; Bradley turned back St. Louis 78-72 and Wichita State nipped Tulsa 81-79.

Wood stays on; McKittrick hired

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Coach Tommy Prothro Thursday decided to retain Willie Wood as defensive backfield coach and add Bob McKittrick, a longtime aide, to his San Diego Chargers staff.

McKittrick has spent 19 years with Prothro, first as a player and then an assistant at Oregon State, U.C.L.A. and the Los Angeles Rams. Woods played 12 years with the Green Bay Packers before joining the Chargers in 1972 as coach of defensive backs.

Weather to determine cage slate

Your guess is probably as good as anyone's on whether or not any basketball games will be played in the area this weekend due to the weather.

The Stover Tournament has already been postponed tonight, however, the Capital City Tournament in Jefferson City is scheduled to get underway this evening.

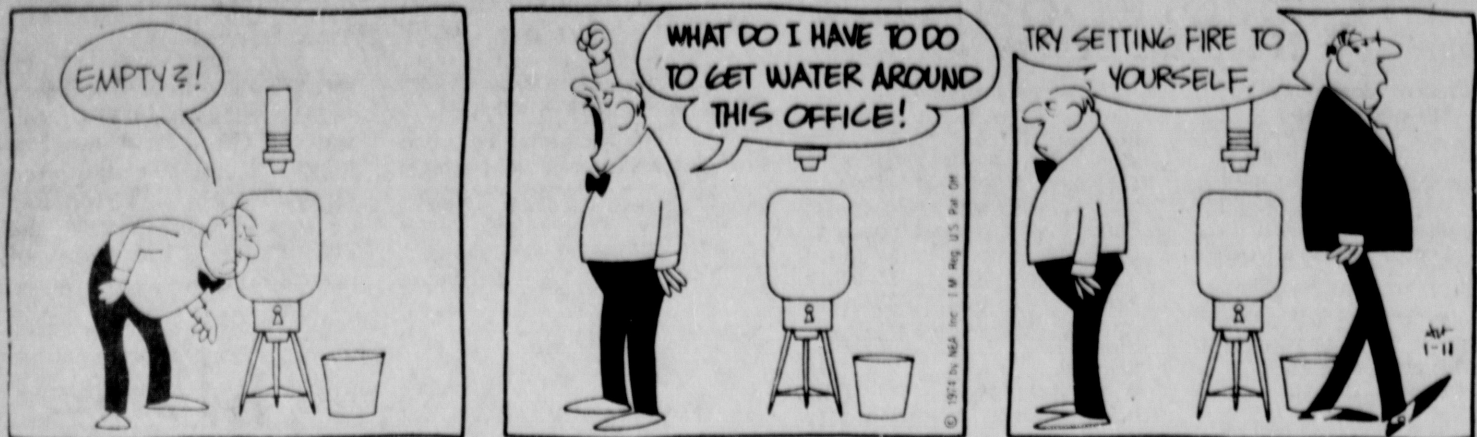

The Knob Noster Invitational, as well as all the games in the West Central, I-70 and Golden Valley Conferences have been cancelled.

Officials in California were still discussing the possibility of holding some of the games in the invitational tournament there tonight, but no official decision had been made as of press time.

Sedalia Smith-Cotton had two games scheduled this weekend, but tonight's non-conference game with Kansas City Southeast is off. School officials were hopeful of being able to hold the Central Missouri Conference game with Hannibal here Saturday night

By Oswald & James Jacoby

After a negative double a jump bid is strength showing, but not forcing. If either partner wants to force to game he does so by cue bidding the enemy suit. This cue bid does not indicate any specific holding; it merely forces to game.

The negative double by North made it easy for South to become declarer in spades. There was no slam anywhere else. With North as declarer the defense would grab the first two heart tricks.

Careful play was required to bring the slam home, but South was equal to the task. He won the club lead; ruffed a club with dummy's ace of trumps. Led the nine to his jack; ruffed another club with the queen; drew trumps; ran the rest of the clubs and dummy's ace-king of diamonds and conceded the last trick.

The bidding is worthy of more comment. After North's cue bid South bid three clubs to show the long suit. North bid three diamonds and South went to three notrump. He didn't know about the spades at that time. Then, when North bid four spades South knew his partner had been heading for that spot all the time and South just bid the slam.

What do you do now?

A — Bid six diamonds. Your partner has made a fancy spade bid to warn you that he has two quick club losers, but that otherwise his hand is very good. Your king of clubs should insure the slam.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding five diamonds your partner has bid four notrump over your three spades and five notrump after you show one ace. What do you do now?

Farm roundup

Previous recommendation on wheat imports was made

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proposal made by the Nixon administration to eliminate existing import quotas on wheat, a move critics say would tend to depress U.S. farm prices, actually was suggested 18 months ago by a team of Agriculture Department experts.

The recommendation was part of an over-all plan aimed at liberalizing world agricultural trade. The report had been requested by Peter M. Flanagan, a White House trade adviser.

Although initially kept under wraps, the so-called Flanagan Report concentrated heavily on ideas for reducing tariffs and other trade barriers, including recommendations for easing many of the traditional U.S. restrictions on agricultural imports.

The plan assumes, the report said, that U.S. farm programs would be gradually keyed to putting more land back into production and thus make wheat, feed grains and soybeans a mainstay of future exports.

"It also assumed that our import restrictions on wheat and dairy products, our import duties on wheat, oilseeds and meals, feed grains and livestock products will be removed gradually over a period of time," the report said.

President Nixon announced last Nov. 1 that he had asked the U.S. Tariff Commission to study the feasibility of removing wheat import quotas. A hearing currently is under way and the commission expects to have a recommendation for the White House by Feb. 15.

The move recently has been seen as a partial answer to the severe export drain on U.S. wheat supplies and not, apparently as another move simply to liberalize trade.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carroll G. Brunthaver, in fact, said Thursday the no-quota proposal was aimed at making Canadian wheat available during times of temporary shortages in the United States.

Brunthaver added, however, that wheat and flour import duties would remain in effect—for now at least—if the proposal to scrap quotas is adopted. Those duties, including a levy of 21 cents per bushel on imported wheat, would serve as a hedge against foreign grain undercutting the U.S. market.

The import quotas currently, as they have for more than 30 years, allow about 800,000 bushels of foreign wheat—nearly all from Canada—to enter the U.S. market annually. Another four million pounds of flour also is permitted.

Those are insignificant when compared to the 1.2 billion bushels of wheat expected to be sold abroad this season by U.S. exporters. But with a removal of restrictions, some groups fear Canadian wheat would glut the U.S. market whenever the world price situation normalizes.

Brunthaver said that in the absence of quotas, emergency action could be undertaken quickly to reimpose them if it appeared foreign wheat was endangering U.S. markets.

Campaign of spying on Kissinger reported

CHICAGO (AP) — A 1971 White House investigation disclosed that top military men conducted a campaign of spying and eavesdropping on Henry A. Kissinger, the Chicago Tribune said in its Friday edition.

The Tribune said the investigation turned up evidence that a spy in Kissinger's National Security Council office passed top secret information to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, including the chairman, Adm. Thomas H. Moorer.

The White House investigation was carried out by the White House plumbers unit and is the "national security matter" frequently cited by President Nixon as his reason for setting up the unit, the newspaper said.

The Tribune said White House special counsel J. Fred Buzhardt said the story contained a "fundamental inaccuracy." But it said he said no story "can be totally accurate on this case."

The newspaper said sources who told of the investigation were unable to produce any proof that Moorer was personally involved in the alleged spying campaign. But it said the probe resulted in "informal allegations" against him.

It said that a former military official with knowledge of the investigation said military men, including Moorer, were disturbed by Kissinger's secret diplomacy and the way he bypassed them with intelligence information.

The Tribune said the investigation began as a probe of a middle level military officer suspected of selling information to newsmen, specifically columnist Jack Anderson.

Former senator is arrested

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A former Arkansas state senator and one of his associates were arrested at Hot Springs, Ark., after a federal grand jury in Kansas City indicted them on charges that they arranged phony loans at the First State Bank of Joplin, Mo.

Q. Byrum Hurst Sr., 55, and Truman Altenbaumer, 41, were released under $5,000 bond apiece after the hearings Thursday.

Neither would comment. Hurst, a Hot Springs lawyer, rancher and businessman, was an Arkansas state senator for 22 years before he ran unsuccessfully for governor in 1972, formerly owned controlling interest and was president and chairman of the Joplin Bank.

He is charged with arranging eight loans for $104,250 during a four-month span in 1972, with the money winding up in his personal bank account.

Patrick E. Eldridge, assistant U.S. district attorney, said Hurst used the money in an attempt to gain control of additional banks in Arkansas and Missouri.

Altenbaumer was charged with aiding and abetting Hurst in arranging one of the eight loans. The formal charge against Hurst is misapplying the funds of the bank.

Eldridge said the investigation stemmed from a routine state examination of the bank in January of 1973.

Jury finds man guilty of manslaughter

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A St. Louis Circuit Court jury early Friday found Samuel Blockton, a former Bi-State Transit System employee, guilty of manslaughter in the fatal shootings of three other workers.

The jury deliberated about seven hours before returning the verdict at 1:15 a.m. in the court of Judge Michael Scott. Blockton, 48, had been charged in connection with the fatal shootings of James I. Story, 32, of Arnold; Marvin Gray, 52, of Hanley Hills, and Donald Parrish, 30, of Webster Groves. The three men were killed at one of the bus firm's garages in St. Louis on Aug. 31, 1972.

Blockton was arrested at the home of a friend last March. He testified in the trial that he had been beaten by the three men.

The jury found him innocent of an assault charge involving another bus firm employee who said Blockton had fired a shot at him.

People in the news

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A leading Vatican official says "if there was a person intimately cordial and also rich in humor then it is Pope Paul VI."

The Most Rev. Giacomo Martin, prefect of the pontifical house, gave some revealing insights into the Pope's audiences in an interview with the Holy See's weekly magazine.

"He always tries to find some point in common with the groups attending the general audience," said Bishop Martin. "Once he received a group of janitors — also meaning gatekeepers."

"I am a janitor; St. Peter is a gatekeeper — we are colleagues," Bishop Martin quoted the Pope as saying.

BURLINGAME, Calif. (AP) — Singer Bing Crosby, in satisfactory condition at a hospital here, is suffering from pneumonia that has caused an abscess in his left lung, his doctor says.

Dr. Stanley M. Hanfling, Crosby's family physician, said doctors are trying to determine the exact nature of the organism that has caused the lesion, which he called a common result of pneumonia.

The 69-year-old entertainer was cheerful despite a fever of about 100 degrees and moderate chest pains.

LONDON (AP) — Dr. Eric S. Abbott, who has been dean of Westminster Abbey for 15 years, has resigned at the age of 67.

Abbott took part in the wedding of Queen Elizabeth II's sister, Princess Margaret, the queen's daughter, Princess Anne, and the queen's cousin, Princess Alexandra.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The widow of muralist David Alfaro Siqueiros says the artist donated his house and a workshop to the people of Mexico.

The artist died last Sunday at the age of 77. He was considered the last of the three great Mexican muralists along with Jose Clemente and Diego Rivera.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Junior Samples, star of the TV's "Hawkeye" show, has been acquitted of battery charges brought by a woman who claimed she was hit while trying to introduce a friend to Samples.

Pravda notes concern on 'mass songs'

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda noted "serious concern" in its lead editorial Friday about the lack of "new genuinely mass songs."

It sharply attacked "tasteless imitations of Western folk songs" which are in circulation, and complained about too much "false pathos or sweet sentimentality" in current Russian hits.

Songs are a major key in "forming a feeling of Soviet patriotism," the Communist party paper said.

"It is difficult to overestimate the role of songs in the ideological education of the people."

What Pravda is looking for is a catchy melody for "use in civic demonstrations and in tight friendly circles around campfires."

The paper was also worried about the state of ballet and opera.

The nation's theaters "desperately need new operas whose musical speech would be up to date," it said.

While steps have been taken to improve ballet "composers should deal more courageously with modern themes, deal more actively with stories of human beings of our days," Pravda said.

Kingdom Day is celebrated on the Caribbean Island of Aruba on Dec. 15. Festivities mark the date in 1954 when the Netherlands Antilles became semi-autonomous and an equal partner, along with Holland and Surinam, in the Kingdom of the Netherlands.

Samples told Criminal Court Judge Woodrow Tucker that he did not slap or hit Joyce Flanagan Almond in the incident at an American Legion Club last Feb. 25.

"I'm a lover, not a fighter," the 285-pound Samples told the judge.

Samples testified Mrs. Almond had been trying to get him to dance with her and had been interrupting him to introduce friends.

He said she followed him outside. "She came up behind me and pulled my necktie," Samples said. "I told her, 'Quit,' but I'm not saying I didn't touch her."

Mrs. Almond testified that Samples struck her with his fist. "My ear was risen up, and I had a real severe bruise on my jaw," Mrs. Almond said. "I couldn't eat or even open my mouth."

In ruling in Samples' favor, Judge Tucker told Mrs. Almond she should not have followed Samples out of the dance.

DATSUN'S INTERMEDIATE

THE 710 Comfort, Economy, and All Points In Between

ECONOMY

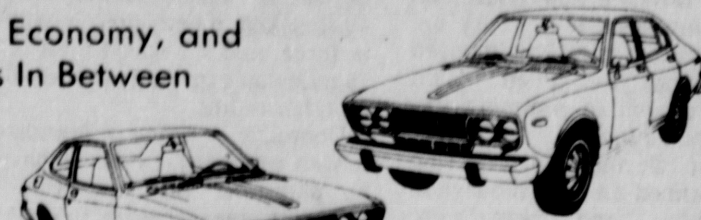

Now there's a car with luxury at a non-premium price. The new Datsun 710. It adds 1974 styling and accommodations plus drive-it-yourself flexibility.

POWER

Flows from its 1800cc single overhead cam engine, in the hardtop, 2 door, and 4 door sedans, plus an all-synchromesh 4-speed transmission. The combination produces remarkable gas mileage, plus reassuring acceleration and passing power.

LUXURY

In the quiet, well insulated passenger compartment, accommodations are plush. Deep padded, body contoured front bucket seats recline fully. Soft easy-care vinyl upholstery and 100% nylon carpeting surround you. With standard equipment like whitewalls and tinted glass, (there's even an electric clock,) only one word can describe it. Beautiful.

try Volkswagen.

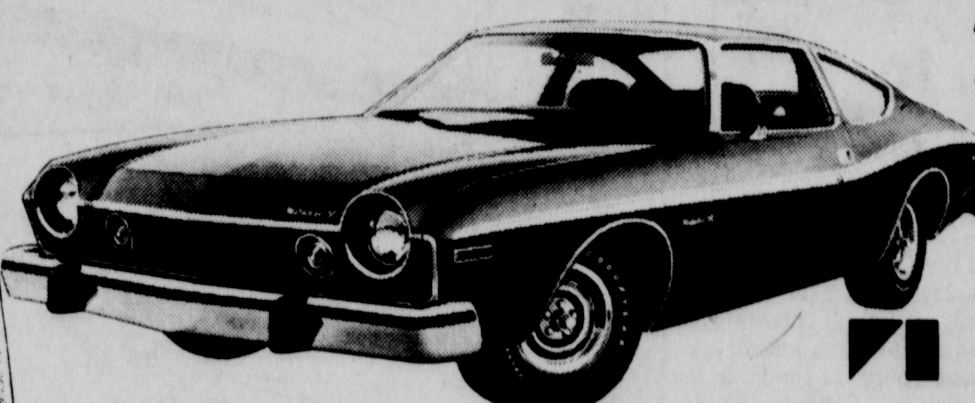

AVW goes a long way in relieving gas problems — by getting terrific gas mileage. It also relieves those little headaches — by needing pints of oil instead of quarts. And not needing antifreeze because of its air-cooled engine. Plus it gets rid of nervous upsets due to owning a new car. With Volkswagen's Owner's Security Blanket, you're provided with the best care any car can have...in sickness and in health. The fact is that Volkswagen can cure lots of problems that most cars can't. Maybe you should take two.

Norway and Netherlands will follow Sweden's rationing lead

LONDON (AP) — Sweden is rationed gasoline for the second day Thursday, and Norway and the Netherlands will have rationing this month. British motorists have been issued ration coupons just in case. In Switzerland, Italy and Austria there are unofficial rumblings about rationing next month if the oil situation doesn't improve. But most West European governments apparently hope that conservation measures will keep the ration books away. These include 50-mile speed limits. There is also an unofficial restriction on driving: gasoline prices have risen as much as 18 cents due to the Arab oil squeeze and now run as high as $1.28 a gallon. Here is a country-by-country picture of gasoline-short Western Europe:

Sweden — Drivers have coupons for just over 26 gallons to last them the seven weeks until March 1. What happens after that depends on the supply situation. Local rationing boards are processing applications from 800,000 Swedes who claim driving is essential for their jobs. Netherlands — Rationing begins Saturday and each car will be given 4 gallons a week. Supplementary rations will be issued for business use, allotted on the basis of 1973 mileage less 25 per cent. The government, fearful of a black market in coupons, says the transfer of coupons from one private car to another will not be prohibited. Norway — A complicated four-tier system of rationing starts Jan. 25 and lasts six weeks. The basic ration is 20 gallons for drivers in the non-essential groups, but essential services and cars deemed "of some importance to society" get more. A ban on Sunday driving, started three weeks ago, continues until rationing starts. Britain — The government was Europe's first to distribute gasoline ration books, and by mid-December everyone had drawn their allocations. Industry Minister Tom Boardman said this week it is "very unlikely rationing will be imposed this month" but added: "I am not prepared to comment further than January." West Germany — Driving was banned on four Sundays in December, and there were plans to start a new system of alternating partial weekend driving bans for cars with even and uneven registration numbers. But this week the government announced that improved prospects for oil supplies mean an indefinite postponement of Sunday bans. France — The only conservation measure is a speed limit, and the government insists no more will be needed. Italy — There has been press speculation that gas rationing may be on the way, but there has been no official indication so far. A Sunday driving ban started last month and is still in force, and the speed limit is 75 miles on expressways and 62 on other roads. Denmark — Alone of Scandinavian countries, Denmark has no plans for rationing. Conservation measures include a ban on Sunday driving, a 50-mile speed limit and a ban on using fuel for flying and boating on Sundays.

Environment, energy fights said similar

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Some lessons learned in the fight to protect the environment may be used effectively to combat the energy crisis, according to environmentalist Dr. Barry Commoner. "There are many similarities in the two crises," said Commoner, who is director of the Center for the Biology of Natural Systems at Washington University here. "In fact, some of the same things that contributed to the environmental crisis are aggravating the energy shortage." Commoner said one of the main problems is that the nation has lost track of the real use value of some of its possessions, and he used the automobile as an example. "In our fight against smog we learned that the car was a growing problem. In the beginning the car was designed for one thing—to get us from point A to point B efficiently. "But the corporations that manufacture automobiles soon learned that there was more profit to be made from turning out larger, heavier cars with powerful, but inefficient engines. They use too much gasoline and contaminated the air. In a way, you can say that Detroit helped create the smog problem and the gasoline shortage." "I believe the current oil shortage in this country is also a consequence of decisions made for profit," Dr. Commoner said in an interview. Commoner said the oil companies halted domestic oil exploration because it was cheaper to buy Arabian oil. "Now they tell us we have been cut off from Arabian oil and that prices for petroleum products must go up because of increased exploration costs and the higher price they must pay for crude oil," he said. In spite of the oil firms' claims, however, Commoner says he is not convinced there is any real shortage of oil. "We have no way of knowing whether the oil companies are holding back on us. There's certainly nothing to stop them from doing it if they wanted to. Even (energy chief William) Simon admitted the other day that there are no records on the amount of oil the companies have stored. It would obviously be profitable for them to make the public believe there is a shortage." Stiff federal regulations were necessary to halt industrial pollution during the environmental crisis, Commoner said, and there may be a need for regulation of the operations of oil firms.

"The cost of pollution control devices and cleaner fuels cut into industry profits," he said, "and made companies reluctant to do anything voluntarily. It could be that the only way to keep the oil companies in line are more regulations." The fuel supply is far too important to the health of the nation's economy to allow it to be used strictly as a tool for higher profits," he said. Regardless of the short-term view, Commoner said, oil is in limited supply. "This country would be wise to control the use of its fossil fuels very closely over the next few years, while working to develop a sensible alternate power supply. Sooner or later we will realize that solar energy is one of the cleanest, most abundant and least expensive sources of energy we can find."

Polly's pointers

No time for bad car habits

By POLLY CRAMER
DEAR POLLY — One of my Pet Peeves is with those foreign cars that have such small turn signal lights in the back that they are almost impossible to see in the daytime. Another Pet Peeve is with people who leave their cars running while they run into the store for a few minutes. With the pollution problems facing us, the gasoline shortage and the high number of thefts it seems they are being very silly. — B.L.
DEAR POLLY — I am answering Winifred who is worrying about new jeans fading so much when first washed. I like to wash my new ones with faded old ones and that way the old jeans get a free dye job from the new ones. After several such washings they are all in good condition. — MRS. F.R.
DEAR POLLY — Even though my son's playpen is the mesh type he still managed to fall against the metal supports that are on two sides. I finally discovered that the old set of bumper guards from his crib are perfect pads once they were cut and tied between the mesh and the metal bars. — JANIE.

DEAR POLLY — My terrarium was so clouded and dingy looking on the inside that I decided if I could not clean it it would have to be banished from my coffee table. I wrapped some cotton around the end of a slender pair of kitchen tongs, held it in place with a rubber band, dipped the cotton in warm water and then swabbed the interior of the terrarium. Do be careful not to bruise the plants. It now looks as bright and clear as when new. — MRS. J.D.D.

DEAR POLLY — Sheets a few inches too short can be a continuing source of irritation. I solve this problem with an hour's work and two yards (for a double bed) of a plain color or cotton print. This length will do four sheets. Tear the fabric lengthwise to make four nine-inch strips. Open the top hem in each sheet. Iron flat. With right sides together stitch a colored strip to the top of each sheet, fold over, turn edges in and stitch in place. If the original fold line is worn use an embroidery attachment to stitch a matching stripe over the worn line. — RUTH.

Pollys problem
DEAR POLLY — I hope someone can tell me how to clean my nice fur bonnet. I have asked a cleaner but received a "no" for an answer. — MARY LOUISE.

Ann Landers

Non-drinker proves point

Dear Ann Landers: Some nutty couple wrote to say you had ruined what might have been a great party by declaring that people who need booze in order to have a good time were either stupid or flaky. They decided to see if you were right, and at their next party they served only soft drinks. It was a real bomb. Everyone left early. Her husband got drunk by himself. Well, I don't drink — ever. And, I'm sure I have a better time than most people I've observed in varying stages of inebriation. One evening, in order to prove my point, I took my tape recorder to a party of several long-time friends. I picked up some of the most damned-fool bits of conversation you can imagine. It surprised even me when I played the stuff back. I invited the same crowd to my place a couple of weeks later and played the tapes for them. A few of the guests didn't like it and said so. They left in a huff. (The worse they sounded the madder they got.) But those tapes of mine put four couples on the wagon, and it's been over a year, so it was worth it. Any person who thinks he sounds the same after a third drink is mistaken and I don't care how well he holds his liquor. — Proof Positive Dear P.P.: First of all, bugging a private conversation without the victims' knowledge is a rotten trick, if not a legal violation. I agree that a drinker is not a very good judge of anything, especially his own behavior, but YOUR behavior and your methods of proving the point are reprehensible. Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 23-year-old virgin. Shocked? Most people are, but it doesn't bother me. I'm in no hurry to get married. The right man hasn't come along yet and I don't believe in giving free samples. I've dated dozens of men, some interesting, others bores. Nearly all of them have tried to get me to go to bed. The variety of approaches would make a fascinating book, but I'm no writer. The oldest line (and it's amazing how many men still use it) is this one: "But honey, you don't know what you're missing if you don't try it." I have a good answer: "Yeah, but if I don't try it I won't miss it." Maybe my letter will help some other girl keep it all together. Another girl's letter helped me two years ago when I nearly lost control of the situation. Any more advice? — C.C.

Dear C.C.: You don't need any. Thanks for a good answer to the oldest question in the world. Dear Ann Landers: I don't want to sound like I'm stuck on myself but I'm a 19-year-old redhead with green eyes. I've been runner-up in three beauty contests and have been told I am beautiful by several men who have been around. The guy I am loony over stands me up at least once a week. He always has some great excuse and I find myself taking him back time and time again. We've been going together for over a year and he is still kissing me goodnight on the cheek. How can I tell if he's alive? He reads your column every day. Your answer could make a lot of difference. — Delia

Dear Delia: You need answers to more questions than the one you've asked, but try this, dear. Hold a mirror up to his mouth. If it fogs up, he's alive. c. 1974, Field Enterprises, Inc.

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Diet vs. exercise

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been on a diet for almost three weeks now. I have only lost two pounds. I weigh 128 right now. I feel that I am starving myself. I eat approximately 1300 calories a day and exercise everyday. I'm 25 years old and very active. I've got a huge stomach and roll around my waist and big thighs. Is dieting more effective than exercise? Am I still consuming too many calories? What would you suggest? Also, I love dry roasted sunflower seeds. Are they really good for you and do they contain a lot of calories?
DEAR READER — You didn't say how tall you are, so it is more difficult for me to judge just how overweight you might be. You are, though, a typical example of people who run the risk of really damaging their health by the type of diet program they pursue. Young, active people on 1600 calories a day lose weight, but also have serious health problems develop, including loss of muscles, hair, sex drive and ability and personality changes. I can't speak out too strongly about the ill-advised practice of overly-restricted diets. You have some protection if you have excess fat since those calories will be used in the process, but you and everyone else should be careful about overdoing the diet bit.

You also represent a common problem in weight reduction, the failure to lose weight at the beginning of the program. It is not unusual for the fat to be used, and the water that is formed in converting the fat to energy be retained in the body. As a result, it may be three weeks before any real change appears on the scales. Then there is a sudden elimination of lots of water with a significant weight loss. Another period may follow when there is no apparent weight loss, then another sudden drop. People often lose weight like this, with plateau periods of no weight loss for several weeks. When they don't understand this, they get discouraged and stop the diet or cut down even further on calories. I am convinced that no one should be on a diet for more than a week that has less than 1500 calories without being under a physician's care. You can do too much damage to yourself with the do-it-yourself programs.

The other point is to be content with a slow loss. More than two pounds a week is too much, too fast after the initial decrease from elimination of retained food residue and loss of energy and perhaps even your health. Exercise is a wonderful way to lose weight. I would prefer that you have a better diet and exercise more each day and that exercise should include as much walking as you can get into your program. I'm skeptical about how many calories you are eating. Sunflower seeds are a good source of polyunsaturated fat. They are very high in calories as are all nuts, and I would not recommend them for anyone on a calorie restricted reducing diet. (Newspaper Enterprise Association)

Nixon concerned with worldwide energy problems

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

President Nixon said Thursday the energy crisis could bring about "severe and irreparable damage" to the world's prosperity.

In letters sent to the governments of oil-consuming nations invited to a Washington conference next month on the energy crisis, Nixon said the fuel shortage "threatens to unleash political and economic forces that could cause severe and irreparable damage to the prosperity and stability of the world."

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said in Washington that the meeting would be the first in a conference series aimed at stabilizing the world's energy balance and economy.

Nixon's letter, released in San Clemente,

Calif., said the situation has produced "an historic crossroad" in which nations "face a fundamental choice that can profoundly affect the structure of international political and economic relations for the remainder of the century."

Stressing a theme later brought out by Kissinger, Nixon wrote:

"Two roads lie before us. We can go our own separate ways, with the prospect of progressive division, the erosion of vital independence, and increasing political and economic conflict; or we can work in concert, developing enlightened unity and cooperation, for the benefit of all mankind—producer and consumer countries alike."

Kissinger said this effort seeks international agreements or understandings on the sharing of energy technology among nations; efforts to determine demand for energy; and measures for conserving energy.

Beyond immediate problems, Kissinger said, lay greater problems for which "we have not even the beginnings of an answer."

One serious problem, he emphasized, was the fate of developing energy-consuming nations, all of whose foreign aid would be wiped out by the recent price increase of foreign oil.

"Our estimate is that their bill may approach $30 billion, which of course far exceeds any of the aid flows that anyone has ever projected," Kissinger said.

He said economic experts believe that bill "cannot be paid."

He said the United States is in a strong position, with its own energy resources and a strong economy, to take care of its own energy needs independently and through bilateral agreements — for example, by making separate arrangements with Arab nations.

However, he said such a narrow approach, lacking regard for other nation's energy patterns, would not be wise in the long run.

"It could be that we will be driven to this," Kissinger warned, but he said it would be far better for the world's nations to solve the energy problems together.

Self-centered policies, he said, would only weaken the economies of other nations and in time the world economy would suffer and the nations would learn that "no nation can prosper in isolation."

Kissinger said the United States could achieve self-sufficiency in energy, and perhaps even an energy surplus, within 10 to 15 years.

Once that happens, he said, the United States would consider sharing its energy with others.

To develop the long-range, global energy policy, Kissinger said a series of meetings was envisioned, beginning with the Feb. 11 meeting announced Wednesday by the White House.

He said the United States would not object if the European nations already invited ask other European governments to participate.

The second stage, Kissinger said, would be a larger meeting of oil-consuming nations, including the developing countries and "other interested parties."

The third step, Kissinger said, would be a meeting of the oil-consuming and oil-producing nations, to take place within three months after the Feb. 11 meeting.

Kissinger was asked whether this diplomatic plan, aiming to create a framework for managing the world's energy flow and thus the global economy, had any precedent.

Kissinger replied there was "no precedent for this approach" and added, "there is no precedent for this problem."

He said the global energy problem was not caused by the Arab Embargo on oil shipments to nations considered friendly to Israel, although the embargo highlighted it.

He said more basic causes were a worldwide growth of demand outstripping energy supply, and the large oil price increases imposed by the Arab nations and then by other producers.

Those prices, Kissinger said, "may have a revolutionary impact on the world economy," which could eventually rebound against the oil producing nations themselves.

More local checks on gasoline pricing

By JOSEPH R. TYBOR
Associated Press Writer

A growing number of state and city governments are investigating rising gasoline prices and no longer are relying only on the federal government to monitor the oil industry, an Associated Press survey indicates.

The survey of 20 states showed that more than half are looking into charges of diluted gasoline, price irregularities and antitrust practices. Until recently they had left these tasks to the Economic Stabilization Office of the Internal Revenue Service.

Some states are considering new legislation dealing with the oil industry. In Missouri, Asst. Atty. Gen. Harvey Tettebaum said he is proposing a state law which would empower him to obtain oil industry data on fuel supplies and pricing practices.

The trend toward greater state monitoring of the oil industry is an outgrowth of the energy crisis and of publicly made charges that the nation's petroleum shortage might be a contrivance of the oil industry. The federal government for years has depended on oil companies for almost all its statistics about oil imports, gasoline and heating oil inventories, refinery runs and production costs.

These figures show that U.S. oil consumption — 17 million barrels daily — exceeds supply because of the Arab oil embargo.

Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., was the latest public official to criticize William E. Simon, head of the Federal Energy Office, for his reliance on oil industry figures. Tunney, in a published interview, said that because of this reliance, Simon "has no way of knowing whether the industry is holding back supplies from the market."

Simon and his aides have replied that they have no reason to doubt the accuracy of oil industry statistics. One aide said that penalties would be imposed for false reporting. Another said that 300 additional IRS agents are being made available for field investigations.

Atty. Gen. Robert Shevin of Florida brought suit in July against 17 major oil companies, accusing them of conspiring to create last summer's gasoline shortage. Now Shevin says his office has stepped up inspections for watered-down gasoline and for irregularities in pricing. Enforcement, however, remains with the IRS, Shevin said.

In Chicago, the Department of Consumer Sales, Weights and Measures has established new monitoring procedures, including laboratory tests for diluted gasoline. Violators face a fine and loss of their operating license.

Jane Byrne, head of the department, accused the IRS this week of "incompetence and delay" in enforcing federal gasoline regulations. She cited what she termed laxity in checking on adulterated gasoline and the required posting of decals specifying octane ratings and ceiling prices.

"She's entitled to her own opinion," an IRS spokesman said.

Three teams of New York City inspectors began enforcement this week of a new city consumer regulation intended to end "unconscionable and deceptive trade practices."

The inspection teams carried portable laboratories built into their vehicles to test gas samples on the spot.

Snow should let up; colder temperatures

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Light snow, freezing drizzle and sleet continued to pelt major portions of Kansas and Missouri Thursday. The National Weather Service promised some abatement in the snow Friday, but no decrease in icy temperatures.

The forecast for Missouri called for an end to light snow and freezing by early Friday but temperatures were expected to remain in the teens and low 20s. The forecast for Kansas called for mostly cloudy skies Friday with highs 5 to 15 and a chance of light snow in the west portion.

Light snow fell Thursday in central and eastern portions of Kansas and in the west and central portions of Missouri, with freezing drizzle and sleet reported in the south central and southeast Missouri. This was added to the two to eight inches of snow that fell in a wide belt across Kansas and Missouri Wednesday and early Thursday.

The Kansas Highway Department reported highways and roads in all divisions except in the southwest portion were snowpacked and icy in spots. Roads in the southwest were near normal or normal with a few set spots. This included the Kansas Turnpike between Kansas City and the Oklahoma line and Interstate 70 across Kansas from Missouri to the Colorado line.

The added snow and hazardous driving conditions in the two states resulted in many school closings and cancellations of high school basketball games and events Thursday night.

The Missouri Highway Patrol reported all major highways were ice and snow covered with freezing drizzle and sleet creating hazardous driving conditions in southeast Missouri.

The icy storm in southeast Missouri snapped tree limbs and knocked out power service early Thursday to about 300 customers of the Missouri Utility Company at Cape Girardeau and a Sikeston area electrical cooperative had power lines downed at about 150 homes.

Fair policies challenged

Although later saying he came "well prepared" to defend his appropriations request before the Senate Appropriations Committee, State Fair Secretary Ron Jones Wednesday encountered some unexpected opposition from committee member Sen. Richard Webster (R-Carhage).

Webster criticized the long-standing Fair custom of employing "big-name" grandstand entertainment personalities from such locales as Nashville, New York and Hollywood.

"We have some of the best country and western and gospel, real folksingers, in Southwestern Missouri in the nation... that would fill the grandstand," Webster said.

The Southwest Missouri senator then attacked what he termed the "hellacious bill each year at the State Fair for country and western clowns from Nashville that can hardly carry a tune."

Webster also wanted to know "why we can't hire Missourians. When are we going to start supporting the state of Missouri instead of bringing in Hollywood clodhoppers? Let's use the taxpayers' money for the promotion of Missouri."

Jones said he "was surprised but certainly not shattered" by Webster's statements.

"I tried to explain to him that we plan to provide entertainment for a wide variety of interests, not just one or two kinds," Jones said. "Maybe we could make money one night out of the Fair with Missouri country and bluegrass singers, but we probably couldn't every night. And, besides, this wouldn't be fair to those who enjoy other styles of musical entertainment."

"The funny thing about Senator Webster's statements," Jones continued "was that we didn't even have time left for much discussion of other facets of the

Icy aftermath

Firemen rummaged through the ice-encrusted rubble of The Carnival, 905 South Limit, Thursday morning following an early-morning battle to extinguish the fire that destroyed the restaurant. The blaze reportedly started in the upstairs portion of the building about 2 a.m. and quickly spread to the rest of the building. By 4 a.m. the building had collapsed and firemen spent the rest of the night and most of Thursday morning extinguishing small, isolated fires that continued to burn in the debris. (See related photo on Page 4)

Pre-dawn blaze destroys restaurant on South Limit

Sedalia firemen were kept busy Wednesday night as they fought two fires over a four-hour period.

The most spectacular fire occurred at 1:52 a.m. when The Carnival, a restaurant at 905 South Limit, was totally destroyed by fire. Damage was estimated by Fire Chief Willis Jabas at approximately $150,000.

The fire, Jabas said, apparently started in the upper area of the two-story building but the cause is currently listed as "undetermined." The blaze quickly spread through the rest of the structure, leaving only two walls standing by daylight Thursday.

Owner Jim Mathewson, 237 Driftwood, reportedly received a call shortly before 2 a.m. advising him that the building was on fire. Mathewson rushed to the scene and was fighting the fire with a small extinguisher when firemen arrived.

A police officer at the scene told The Democrat-Capitol that dense smoke hampered firemen at the start and made it difficult for them to locate the fire. The officer said the smoke poured out of the building for a while before the flames seemed to "bust loose through every window."

Firemen remained on the scene throughout the night and Thursday morning, extinguishing several small fires still to be found in the smoldering ruins. The firetrucks finally returned to their stations at 12:30 p.m. Thursday.

Neither Mathewson nor Earl Thomas, owner of the building, were available for comment Thursday morning, although it was reported that they were meeting with insurance representatives in an effort to evaluate the damage.

The Carnival was formerly LeRoy's Steak House, a favorite late-night meeting spot for area residents.

Mathewson operated LeRoy's for eight years before remodeling the building and opening The Carnival in early August of last year.

Firemen responded to an earlier call at the Auto-Teria Car Wash, 1703 West 16th, after burglars entered the business and apparently shorted out some wires while breaking into four coin boxes from which they took an undetermined amount of money.

Firemen responded to the call at about 9:30 p.m. and notified police of the break-in. Damage to the business was listed as $500 to the building and $1,000 to the contents. The value of the damaged coin boxes was set at $400.

Snow hampering police functions

According to Police Chief William Miller, the new snow accumulation and freezing rain has not seriously hampered police activities, although police response to calls may be slowed.

Miller said that three squad cars had become stuck between Wednesday night and Thursday morning, and required a tow truck to get them going again, but that all of the six squad cars were being equipped with chains Thursday morning. Before, only three of the cars were fitted with chains.

"The weather hasn't really hampered us," said Miller. "We're still responding to all calls but the people should understand that it will probably take a little longer to get there due to the heavy snow and icy conditions."

Miller said the number of accidents over the past few days have not been higher than normal.

"We're not having a lot of traffic accidents because people are staying in," Miller said. "They're not driving unless it's necessary and those that do drive are exercising extreme caution."

Police are still running emergency calls for people that are snowbound and can't get out, Miller said, but emphasized that the calls are taken only in an emergency situation in which the elderly or handicapped must have groceries or medicine and cannot get out.

"We're not buying their groceries or medicine," he stated, "but we'll get it for them if it's an emergency and they have no other means."

The barrage of ice, rain and snow caused injuries reported to the Bothwell Hospital emergency room to be "running a little more than usual," a hospital spokesman said.

Truman Dam bids upcoming

(Democrat-Capitol Service)

WARSAW — Bids will be opened in April to begin work on the next to the last stage of construction on the Harry S. Truman Dam project here, it was announced Wednesday.

Lt. Col. James Peck, deputy district engineer for the Army at Kansas City, said the work, estimated to cost over $10 million, will involve the completion of the reservoir embankment project and power house construction.

Peck made the announcement in a speech to the Kansas Contractors Association at their annual meeting in Kansas City.

The embankment project, Peck told The Democrat-Capitol Thursday will consist of building up the dam with earth fills. The power house project, Peck said, will reflect "our work on the building which will be at the heart of the dam." The power house, he said, will be the site for all dam turbines, pumps and other power units.

Completion of the power house project, Peck said, is estimated for 1981, a year after the dam itself is scheduled to start backing up water.

Peck also announced that bids will be taken project for highways and railroads near the dam site.

Referring to the energy crisis, Peck urged the contractors to arrange for construction supplies as soon as possible. He also encouraged the use of substitute materials when feasible.

While Peck told the contractors that "we simply do not know what the situation is going to be regarding fuel for conservation," he said Thursday that the Truman Dam project "as of now has not been plagued with problems of this sort... it's the weather, more than anything else, that is slowing our work in Warsaw now."

Peck also noted that hydroelectric power projects, which the Truman project is, will have high priorities on fuel for construction.

In another announcement, Peck reported that bids will be opened soon for an improvements program at Whiteman AFB estimated to cost slightly under $5 million.

One segment of the improvements program, which he estimated may cost up to $5 million, will be installation of air conditioning and the construction of additional improvements in airman barracks.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

In 1972, the American Kennel Club registered a record 1,101,943 pure-bred dogs, of 120 different breeds. The World Almanac says. The most popular breeds were: poodles, 218,899; German shepherds, 101,399; beagles, 57,050; dachshunds, 55,149; Irish setters, 43,707; miniature schnauzers, 43,280; St. Bernards, 35,559; Labrador retrievers, 32,251; collies, 28,459; and doberman pinschers, 27,767.

WASHINGTON — The Ripoff Oil Co. was worried. A meeting of the executive committee was called at a duck shoot club in South Carolina to discuss ways and means of combating the bad publicity petroleum companies were getting over the energy crisis.

Harlan Mudbank, president of Ripoff, presented the problem.

Buchwald

"Gentlemen, I am sorry to say that the oil companies have a very bad image because of the fuel shortage that unfortunately has gripped the country in the last six months. The purpose of this meeting is to find a way to tell our story to the American people. Are there any suggestions?"

Wilton Willbank, the advertising vice president, said, "Why don't we launch a national advertising campaign to show that in spite of the crisis, Ripoff is keeping its prices down?"

Polishing up Big Oil's bad image

"Excellent," said Mudbank, "but where do we get the money to pay for the campaign?"

Willbank replied, "By raising the price of our gasoline a penny a gallon."

Mudbank smiled. "Good thinking. If there are no objections the proposal is accepted. Are there any other ideas?"

Marvin Snowbank, vice president in charge of public affairs, said, "It seems to me the key to a good image is Congress. We must persuade our lawmakers that we are doing the best we can to provide the necessary fuel at reasonable cost to the consumer."

"How do we do this?"

Snowbank opened his folder. "By contributing to the political campaigns of EVERYONE running for office in 1974."

"But," said Mudbank, "that would cost us a fortune."

Snowbank read from a paper. "Our Washington lobbyists believe we can do it by adding only two cents to what we are now charging for a gallon of gas."

"It doesn't seem to be out of line," the comptroller said. "It cost us a cent a gallon just to elect Nixon. For two cents a gallon we're getting an entire Congress."

"Good," said Mudbank. "We seem to be making progress. What else can we do to win the hearts and minds of the American people?"

Rineholt Sandbank, the vice president for financial affairs, said, "One of the things that seems to be bugging the American people is our profit picture. I estimate we stand to make 160 per cent profit after taxes this year. We must persuade the country that these profits are within the cost-of-living guidelines."

"How?" Mudbank asked.

"By distributing American flag pins for every customer's lapel. I can't conceive of anyone questioning our profits if we give them a free American flag."

"Those lapel flags aren't cheap," the comptroller protested.

"Well pass on the cost of them to the customer. Three cents a gallon is a small price to pay for the privilege of wearing Old Glory," said Sandbank.

No objection was raised and Mudbank continued.

"While we're at it, I'd like to bring up another problem. No one is certain how long this energy crisis will last. There may come a day when new sources of energy will be found. It is even possible that someone will develop an automobile that doesn't use gasoline. In 20 years this could put us in a terrible profit squeeze. We can't wait until it happens. We must prepare for it now. What do we do?"

The vice president for financial affairs said, "It's obvious. We charge an extra nickel a gallon which we'll invest in tax-free bonds. No one can object to our ensuring ourselves against future unfair competition."

Mudbank seemed very pleased. "This has been a most successful meeting. Now let's all go out and shoot some ducks."

Lawyers: time to specialize

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger not long ago threw the weight of his experience and his office behind an idea whose time has clearly come. The idea is to create a system for training and certifying a new school of trial lawyers who would become, in effect, the barristers of the American bar.

Kilpatrick

The idea, of course, is not new. England historically has divided her legal practitioners into solicitors and barristers. The former undertake an immense variety of legal tasks, but their work is done back in the office; the latter specialize in one task only: They go to court for the actual trial of cases.

Here in the United States, leading members of the bar for many years have urged some adaptation of the British system to our own law. The American Bar Association has a Special Committee on Specialization working on the problems. Several states, notably California and Texas, have launched experimental programs toward this end. In November, California awarded nearly 1,200 certificates of specialization in taxation, criminal law, and workmen's compensation.

Burger's idea is to concentrate first of all upon trial lawyers as such. In his address of Nov. 26 at the Fordham Law School, he made a number of cogent observations, and he developed a couple of pointed analogies. Every person who is graduated from a flying school is by definition a pilot; every student who emerges from medical school is by definition a doctor. But society prudently has decreed that not every pilot is qualified to fly a four-engine jet, and not every doctor is qualified to transplant a kidney. By the same token, Burger insists, it is folly to suppose that every law school graduate automatically is qualified to go into court and try a civil or criminal case.

Newspaper reporters who cover the trial courts surely would concur in Burger's opinion on "the low state of American trial advocacy." Every experienced reporter, sitting mute at the press table, has groaned inwardly at the ineptitude of courtroom amateurs who make a hundred immaterial objections and fail to ask the two or three key questions. In the criminal courts, it is by no means unusual for both the government and the defense to launch into trial with only the most foggy notion of what the case is all about.

The British do it better. Of their 30,000 lawyers, about 3,000 are barristers. They are specially trained, first in law school and then in a period of pupillage, for the difficult and demanding business of actual trial. An American who visits the Inns of Court, and sees the barristers in action, comes away with an envious impression of trial practice at its best. These advocates go at their work with deference and civility, but one ought not to be deceived by the respectful yes, m'lord, and no, m'lord; beneath the ribboned perukes are keen minds, honed for skilled shaping of the case at hand.

Burger does not recommend adoption of the British system as such. Our country is too large, and the rules of state and federal practice too diverse, for the system to be applied here. But he does urge that law students, after completion of their second year, be permitted to pursue trial practice as a specialty; and he proposes that state bars, courts and law schools unite in "prompt and concrete steps" toward the certification of trial lawyers.

As things stand now, in Burger's view, "we are more casual about qualifying the people we allow to act as advocates in the courtroom than we are about licensing our electricians." If we are prepared to agree that liberty and property are at least as important as light bulbs, we ought as laymen to support this sensible certification plan.

Economic developer: a curious history

A director of economic development for Sedalia appears to be a dead issue at the moment. But in reviewing recent events concerning the office, one cannot help but be struck by the many inconsistencies.

At its Nov. 5 meeting, the City Council split, mainly along party lines, as to whether a replacement for Bill Hall should be hired. A decision on letting the Economic Development Board proceed with interviews was postponed until the Nov. 19 meeting.

Then, at that meeting, several Democratic councilmen changed signals, voting 6-1 to hold interviews. Only Councilman Carl Franklin has maintained consistent opposition to the matter, stating that he is against hiring a man because of the energy question.

The Economic Development Board proceeded with its interviews, and on Dec. 13 reached a unanimous decision on one applicant. Among those so voting was member Raymond Bales, who had also voted with the City Council majority on Nov. 19 to hold the interviews.

Last Monday, the City Council voted 5-3 against hiring the applicant recommended for the job by the non-partisan Economic Development Board. Councilman Bales, and some of his colleagues who had originally voted to hold interviews, fell back into the "no" column.

All of this means that the board expended a great deal of time and effort for nought, after receiving the council's implied consent that a qualified applicant would be hired. The applicants themselves certainly were inconvenienced, especially those from out of town.

After the council's Monday night vote, one member of the economic board, who had argued earlier before the council as to the need for filling the position, asked what the board should do now. It would appear to be something of a useless appendage without a director to carry out its wishes.

The fact is, political considerations have played a major part in the council's on-again, off-again approach to the economic developer position. We hope that the job eventually will be filled in a manner that asks only what is best for Sedalia.

Merry-go-round

U.S. oil combine backed Arab hikes

WASHINGTON — Locked in the files of Aramco, intended for the eyes only of its top executives, is evidence that the giant U.S. oil combine encouraged Saudi Arabia to increase oil prices.

According to the secret paperwork, Aramco calculated that a price increase would boost its "rate of return." So the company, fearing nationalization of its Saudi oil works "well before 1980" and wishing to squeeze out more profits before the takeover, pressed quietly for higher prices.

The cost of crude has shot up 470 per cent over the past year. This has caused economic shock waves throughout the industrial world and could precipitate a worldwide depression.

The Aramco documents show that the corporate controllers were uneasy over the size of the increase and, belatedly, began to worry about the world reaction.

Likely, too, the Persian Gulf countries would have raised prices without any behind-the-scenes encouragement from Aramco. Still, the company deserves a measure of blame for the Great Price Squeeze.

Aramco, known more formally as the Arabian-American Oil Company, is a consortium of four U.S. corporations — Exxon, Mobil, Standard of California and Texaco. Together, they work the fabulously rich oil fields of Saudi Arabia.

As surely as oil is the lifeblood of the West, the Saudi development is the jugular vein.

We have now been given a peek behind the corporate curtain, which for years has concealed the Saudi oil story. We happen to believe that the truth about the oil crisis is a journalistic challenge every bit as important as Watergate. Not only the press but the government itself has had to depend upon the oil companies for information about the dimensions of the crisis.

Now, we have developed our own sources inside Aramco who have access to its most secret files. Admittedly, they have been able to give us only a limited view into the backrooms of the great oil consortium. Many of the documents are also highly technical and, therefore, difficult for laymen to understand.

To protect our sources, we have agreed not to quote directly from the documents. We read carefully selected excerpts to an Aramco spokesman, who disputed the contents. "A lot of people within the company write memos," he said. "This doesn't mean everything they write is correct."

Nevertheless, the confidential memos, supported by tables giving the "rate of return" at various price levels, show that the company early last year was quietly agitating for higher prices.

The documents also show that the company later became alarmed over the greed of the oil producers. In fairness, the press for extortionary prices came more from Saudi Arabia's neighbors than from the Saudis.

Aramco sent a delegation, headed by George Piercey, a senior Exxon vice president, to urge Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani last fall to hold down the price demands. "We were trying," an Aramco spokesman told us, quite accurately, "to keep prices from going crazy."

But Aramco's only concern, judging from the documents, was to prevent political repercussions in the West. Earlier, the company had helped to stimulate a price increase.

The production costs for a 42-gallon barrel of Saudi oil averages only a trifling 12 cents. In contrast, the posted price finally hit $11.65 a barrel on Jan. 1. This is a fictitious price, which the oil nations use to calculate taxes and royalties. The actual price for a barrel of crude, upon arrival in America, is closer to $9.

Aramco's confidential price-and-profit tables are based on complex calculations. But they can be reduced to this simplicity: The company winds up with a percentage of the price rise. Therefore, the higher the prices, the higher are Aramco's profits.

One reason for this is that the company can charge off the royalties and taxes it pays to Saudi Arabia, dollar for dollar, against its U.S. taxes. This lovely loophole leaves the four members of the consortium with a U.S. tax debt next to nothing.

In 1972, Exxon, with a 6.5 per cent tax rate, paid the most. Mobil paid only 1.3 per cent; Standard of California, 2.05; and Texaco, 1.7. Other U.S. corporations pay around 50 per cent.

Now, Saudi Arabia has increased Aramco's tax benefits by raising the royalties from about $3 to $7 per barrel.

The confidential tables also indicate that Aramco gets a pay-back from Saudi Arabia for its technical help in developing new industries, such as salt production. The tables aren't clear, but it appears that the proportion of the pay-back increases as the price of oil goes up.

In short, the secret documents reveal that the four Aramco partners are making a profit off the price increase. Only their customers are hurting.

FOOTNOTE: The documents show that Aramco is changing its economic base. Because the Saudis are expected to take over the oil at the well-head, the company is preparing to take its profits from refining and marketing. In the past, it has been the other way around.

Some negative-double devotees carry it forward to cover all overcalls. Others go through a fairly sensible two or three-spade limit.

Of course, those who say they double any bid negatively, point out that the higher the bid the more likely that partner will leave it in. These high-level negative doubles certainly live up to the game, although it is doubtful which side benefits from them.

North and South were playing negative doubles through three spades so when West made his preemptive three spade overcall of South's opening club bid North stuck in a negative double.

Not that we should really blame negative doubles for his action. North had barely enough for a negative double at the one level. His three level double had to be close to suicidal.

On the other hand if he didn't have that toy to play with he would have passed. West would have played three spades and been down one after losing two clubs, two diamonds and a spade.

As it was, South bid four hearts in response to his partner's request. When it got around to East, he doubled. West opened the ace of spades and continued with the queen which East ruffed. After this start East still made two trump tricks and a club for a nice 500-point profit.

LaMonte man's murder still being probed

(Democrat-Capital Service)

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — No arrests have been made in the investigation of the death of Michael Alan Griffin, 19, a former LaMonte resident, a military spokesman here said Thursday.

Griffin, an Army private, was apparently murdered here Dec. 31, the Army said. His body was found in a deserted area of the base by three hunters. Griffin was shot twice in the back with a shotgun.

"The military police are still investigating the case...and no arrests have been made yet," the spokesman said. "No information concerning the case will be disclosed until the investigation has concluded."

The spokesman said he did not know when the investigation would be completed.

Military graveside services for Griffin were held Monday at the National Cemetery in Springfield. Survivors include his mother, Mrs. Anna Klein, LaMonte.

budget such as plumbing and other fair improvements."

Despite Webster's remarks, the appropriations committee, overall, appeared receptive to most of the requests it heard Wednesday.

Jones requested $1,122,000 for the fair budget this year, a decrease of some $47,000 from his original request submitted for the preliminary consideration of Gov. Christopher Bond.

"We decided to go with the governor's figure," Jones said.

This year's request exceeds the amount allocated to the fair last year by $104,000.

The large bulk of this additional request, it was earlier indicated, would go to capital improvements, including an extensive roofing program and plumbing improvements.

Jones said the legislature's final decision on his budget request will probably not be made for at least two months.

Cutback on gas less than feared

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Federal Energy Office official said Thursday that the curtailment in gasoline production may be much less than expected because the petroleum shortage is not as great as was feared.

William A. Johnson, director of policy analysis for the energy office, said it may be necessary to only reduce production by about 15 per cent instead of 30 per cent, which was the original estimate.

He also said that "evidence suggests we will be able to avoid rationing in the country."

Johnson told travel industry representatives at a Commerce Department-sponsored conference that there is more fuel than expected because "people are conserving fuel."

In addition to conservation of fuel, warmer weather than normal and a leakage of oil through the Arab embargo have been other factors contributing to the better-than-expected energy outlook.

But Johnson also warned that it would be dangerous for people to feel there is no energy crisis.

"People have to give up the illusion, the self-deception that is permeating the country, that the energy crisis is a hoax, plotted by major oil companies to drive up prices or put independent companies out of business," he said.

He said the crisis is real and that the oil industry is essential in helping to solve it.

Johnson said that even in the event rationing is necessary, it would not mean an end to pleasure driving. The program would be flexible, so that families can conserve fuel in other ways, they likely would have ration tickets to buy gasoline for vacation trips.

Johnson said petroleum allocation regulations to be released Friday will provide for 95 per cent allocation to commercial airlines, "which should not significantly impair flight schedules."

He said regular train and bus service will have 100 per cent of needs, as will tour buses and charter services.

get some (patients) who have fallen on the ice," the spokesman said.

Local and area schools remained closed Thursday as snowfall played further havoc on streets and roads already ice-coated.

Numerous meetings and other activities scheduled for Thursday were postponed in the wake of the winter storm. These included a Pettis County Red Cross meeting, which was rescheduled for 10:30 a.m. Tuesday, and the Stover senior-high boys basketball tournament, which was postponed until tonight, weather permitting. Three games were scheduled to be played.

The Sedalia Knife and Fork Club meeting, scheduled for Saturday, has been postponed indefinitely.

Kissinger hopeful on Mideast talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said Thursday he expects his trip to the Middle East to produce a basis of negotiations between Egypt and Israel on disengagement of their forces near the Suez Canal.

Kissinger agreed at a news conference with the suggestion that there is a danger that he would eclipse the role of the countries in reaching an agreement. But he said "in this crucial phase it's most important to get the process started."

Kissinger was scheduled to leave at midnight for Egypt with a brief stop along the way in Spain. He said he will take to President Anwar Sadat of Egypt some "general ideas" about disengagement and then, in Israel, see whether a concrete proposal for disengagement can be reached.

Offering himself as willing to shuttle between Sadat and the Israeli Cabinet, Kissinger said he would then gladly go to Aswan, where Sadat is recovering from bronchitis to nail the proposal down.

The secretary said he did not expect Israel and Egypt actually to reach an agreement during his third swing through the Middle East since the Israeli war. "The more likely outcome of this would be that negotiations could be conducted" in Geneva, he said.

After flying all night, Kissinger will reach Madrid in midafternoon for a two hour meeting with Pedro Cortina, the Spanish foreign minister. The talks are likely to focus on continued use of an air base outside Madrid and a nuclear submarine base at Rota.

Kissinger is due in Aswan Friday night and will stay over until Saturday evening when he flies to Jerusalem to see Premier Golda Meir and Israeli cabinet ministers.

On other matters Kissinger said:

1. The administration would seek in a series of meetings with consuming and producing nations a global approach to sources of energy supply and the pricing of gasoline and other products.

2. France, in working out an agreement with oil rich Saudi Arabia may be helping itself, but in the long run faces the prospect of being sucked into an international depression as demands for energy escalate beyond supply.

3. The underdeveloped nations stand to suffer the most from the energy shortage, with all the foreign aid that has flown to

Break-in at Commodity Foods Center

A break in at the Pettis County Commodity Foods Center, 118 North Lamine, was reported to police Thursday.

Mrs. Luann Eschbacher, manager, told police that she noticed the break-in when she arrived at work Thursday morning. The front door of the building had been broken open, police reported.

A soft drink machine was broken into and $4 was found missing.

Doty Moving and Storage, located in the same building, also reported a theft which occurred sometime Wednesday evening, police said.

Entry was gained through the front door of the commodity center and a calculator of undetermined value was taken, police reported.

In other police news, a theft at Sedalia Implement Co., 2205 South Limit, was reported Monday.

A spokesman for the company told police that sometime Jan. 5 two implement batteries valued at $12, and a gear box valued at $52 were taken.

The spokesman told police the items had been stored outside the building.

Joyce Dotson, 408 North Hurley, told police that all four tires on her car had been slashed. The tires were cut sometime between 2 a.m. and 10 a.m. Thursday, police reported.

4. Substantial progress has been made between the United States and Panama toward a statement of principles to guide a new Canal Zone Treaty.

Kissinger did not dispute reports that the United States and Israel are near agreement after Defense Minister Moshe Dayan's trip here last week on an Israeli withdrawal from the Suez Canal.

But he said he was not bringing any specific proposal to Sadat.

Once the "initial phase" of working out a disengagement is past, Kissinger said his own role in the peace conference would be reduced. He said he would participate "only when there is a deadlock."

Commodity futures show some advance

CHICAGO (AP) — Farm commodity futures pulled away from a sharp decline on the Chicago Board of Trade Thursday and closed with a limit advance in the major pits.

After a session of limit declines, wheat and soybeans futures closed with gains of 20 cents a bushel, corn was up the limit of 10 cents, oats limited at 6 cents a bushel, soybean oil was up 100 points, or 1 cent a pound.

Soybean meal touched the limit of $10 a ton, then retreated in the closing seconds as profits were taken.

Prices on the opening were firm to strong in wheat, corn, soybeans and the end products, but there was a period of profit-taking. Then, it appeared, that new buying set in and the prices took off.
